Urge Vote On Future Wars

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
(International News Service Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—A determined drive to keep the United States from plunging into any foreign war, without the voted consent of the American people, was under way in Congress today.

Constitutional amendments introduced in Senate and House propose to give the American people the right to a direct vote on the question of going to war. The referendum, however, would not apply to defense against an outright invasion of the American continent by some foreign foe.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette (P) of Wis., introduced the proposed amendment in the Senate, while Rep. William A. Ashbrook (D) of Ohio, offered it in the House.

At the same time, Senator Arthur Capper (R) of Kansas, announced he would sponsor another like amendment in the Senate.

This action came on the heels of the exclusive disclosure by International News Service of the Balfour document, revealing how the American people were kept in the dark as to the Allies'

Woman Dying In Stove Blast

WORCESTER, Nov. 17—An oil stove exploded in the face of Miss Jeanne Ubschon, 81, today as she cooked breakfa and enveloped her in flaming oil.

The elderly woman was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. Flames caused $2000 damage in the house where she lived alone.

Her name was placed on the danger list and little hope was held for her recovery.

Police said Miss Ubschon had ignited the stove, fed by oil, and suddenly it burst, spewing flaming liquid in her face.

Neighbors, hearing her screams, found her on the floor, clothes ablaze. They wrapped her in blankets and called police.

The house, in Millbury, just over the Worcester line, was saved from complete destruction by Worcester firemen.

Girl Falls In Front of Tube Train

Motorman Stops Cars Before Typist Is Seriously Hurt

Bringing shrieks of horror from scores of waiting passengers, Miss Florence Lupton, 26, of Browne street, Brookline, toppled into the Washington street subway pit today as a train roared into State street station.

Frantically working his air brakes, Motorman Thomas Doherty brought the train to a halt after it had barely struck the prostrate girl, rolling her over the ties for a few feet.

She did not go under the wheels, however, and at Haymarket Relief Hospital doctors found she had suffered only bruises.

According to police the girl, on the way to the hospital, said she had been despondent, but when police questioned her about her relatives, she said:

"Never mind; keep the family out of it."

Police said the girl's mother, reached at the Brookline home, also said the girl had been despondent.

She lived with her mother and works in a downtown insurance office.

Mrs. Lupton hastened to the hospital when informed that her daughter was there.

Parents Beg Aid In Student Hunt

Reaching Cambridge after a heartbreaking journey from their home in Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Burgess today issued a general appeal for information regarding their son, F. William Burgess, 21-year-old Harvard student, believed drowned in the Charles River.

The grief-shaken couple pleaded:

"If anybody has seen our boy since Saturday, November 13, when he left his room, will that person please get in touch with William Kiniry of the Metropolitan police, Calvert Magruder of the Harvard Law School, or Charles Apted, head of the Harvard police."

Mr. and Mrs. Burgess, describing their son, said he was five feet, eight inches in height, weighed 1669 and had blue eyes and slightly wavy light brown hair.

The parents of young Burgess, a law school student, started eastward when police notified them that clothing nad a watch apparently belonging to their son had been found on the West Boston bridge, spanning the river, on Sunday.

The young man had not been seen since classes were dismissed on Saturday.

Pushing their search for the student's body, Metropolitan police today were dragging the lower Charles river basin.

Bay Staters Open Shoe Pact War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—Massachusetts Republican Representatives announced today they would demand immediate hearings before the ways and means committee to delay proposed reciprocal trade treaty negotiations with Czechoslovakia.

They said they would sign a petition asking the committee to grant public hearings on resolutions asking Secretary Hull to delay negotiations until the tariff commission completed investigation of the difference of production costs for shoes here and in Czechoslovakia.

The resolution was introduced yesterday by Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth, Milton, Mass.

ASK OTHERS TO JOIN

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., North Attleboro, Mass., representing the group, said congressmen from other sections of the country would be asked to join in the protest.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Lowell, Mass., said she had asked Representative Thomason (D.) of Texas to join the Bay State congressmen in their opposition to the treaty on behalf of the hide and leather industry.

Martin said the congressmen also wanted to delay the negotiations until a study of wages in the textile industry had been completed by the labor department.

SALEM WORKERS' PLEA

Representative George J. Bates, Salem, Mass., said he had received a petition opposing the proposed trade treaty signed by 2200 workers of the Pequot mills, Salem.

Bates said inclusion of sheeting and pillow cases in the treaty would endanger the jobs of those employes.

Martin said items congressmen wanted excluded from negotiations included shoes, textiles, jewelry, rubber and hides and leather, all of which are manufactured or used for manufacture in New England.

Those at the conference were Representatives Martin, Mrs. Rogers, Wigglesworth, Bates, Robert Luce, Waltham, Pehr G. Holmes, Worcester; Charles L. Gifford, Cotuit, and Allen T. Treadway, Stockbridge.

Helen Morgan Hurt, But Won't Tell Age

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Don't ask the Brooklyn police the age of Helen Morgan, the blues singer. They asked her today, but they didn't find out.

Miss Morgan and two other persons were in a minor automobile accident. Slightly cut and bruised, they were treated at a hospital. Police asked the singer her age, for the record, but they didn't find out.

SANTOSUOSSO CROSS-EXAMINED IN CITY'S $50,000 SUIT

Because he "saw no reason for helping the city's case," Dr. Joseph Santosuosso failed to answer some of the interrogations propounded in the city's $50,000 suit against himself and former Mayor Curley, the doctor-lawyer admitted on the stand today.

Testifying in superior Court today in the suit being heard by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick without a jury, Santosuosso said that in answers he did make to the interrogatories he made a general denial of the city's charges.

In the suit, it is charged that Santosusso and Curley received this sum illegally in 1933 as a result of a suit against the city by the General Equipment Corporation being settled out of court for $85,000.

McCLENNAN OPENS QUIZ

The suit is based largely on an affidavit made by Frederick H. Graves, insurance representative declared to have represented the corporation.

Edward F. McClennan, special counsel for the city of Boston, cross-examined Santosuosso today in a courtroom which had none of the overflow crowd present yester-

2 Kidnapers Caught, 3d In Gun Duel

BULLETIN

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 17 (INS)—Two of the three escaped O'Connell kidnap gang were captured this afternoon in a rooming house and the third bandit was shooting it out with more than forty police officers. The pair caught were John J. Oley and Harold ("Red") Crowley. They surrendered without firing a shot.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 17 (INS)—The laugh was on the "public enemies" today.

"Free" as mice in a trap were the O'Connell kidnapers who walked out of Onondaga prison yesterday with a guard for a shield.

Turned back at every exit, the fugitives—John Oley, Percy Geary and Harold Crowley—were still in Syracuse early today—cursing their luck and the police net which drew tighter and tighter around them.

Gone was their cool insolence early this morning when they commandeered the automobile of William King, middle-aged garage worker, and ordered him to "drive like hell for Dewitt."

Their two guns still gave them "mobster" courage, but there was none of the careful planning which preceded and accompanied their prison break.

BLOCKED AT CITY LINE

They didn't get to Dewitt. State troopers at the city line to stop every car sent them sweating back into the city and to King's house for a bite to eat—"we're hungry."

They ate, discussed further plans

Brown Football Held 'Side Show'

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 17—Although Brown University has the largest number of admission applications in all its 173 years, football has had little to do with it, Dr. Bruce M. Bigelow, director of admission, said today.

In an article in the Brown alumni monthly, Dr. Bigelow styled the university as "the big tent," and football as only "an intriguing sideshow."

"Observations clearly indicate to me," the article said, "that the effect of a football season on applications for admission is not what most alumni expect."

He pointed out that football victories at Brown have been scarce in the last four years, while admission applications have steadily mounted.

Strip Escorts Of Strip Girl

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 17 (INS)—Two bandits today held up Faith Bacon, the strip-tease dancer, collected $100 and forced her two escorts to remove their pants.

But the brigands while favoring the strip act in their own profession showed a surprising intolerance for it in the amusement world.

They bitterly rebuked Miss Bacon for disrobing on the stage, calling her a "naked she-male."

The hold-up occurred on the outskirts of the city. Miss Bacon's purse yielded $50 and the escorts gave up $25 each, and then their trousers, so they scarcely would be in a position to organize a pursuit.

Identity of her two companions was not immediately learned.

Hurleys Happy Over New Sister

NANCY HURLEY CHARLES F. HURLEY, JR. BETTY HURLEY

That smile of Betty Hurley, 12, who is at the telephone, told a story of delight as the daughter of Governor and Mrs. Charles F. Hurley called the Wyman House, Cambridge Hospital, to find out all about her new sister. Of course Nancy, 5, and Charles F. Jr., 10, were equally delighted to know about their 6-pound 12-ounce sister, born last night to the First Lady of Massachusetts. Mrs. Hurley later talked to Betty, giving instructions as to school and duties of day.

President Told To Stay in Bed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt still had a slight temperature from an infected tooth today and doctors ordered him to stay in bed.

All engagements, including a press conference postponed from yesterday, were cancelled for the second successive day.

Lieutenant Commander Arthur H. Yando, naval dentist, treated the ailing tooth again this morning, and when Captain Ross T. McIntire, the President's physician, found the slight fever continuing from yesterday, he ordered his patient to remain in bed.

'Lord Takes Away, Gives,' Says Hurley of New Babe

"Such is the way of the good Lord. He takes and He gives."

With these simple words, Governor Charles F. Hurley today offered humble thanks for the gift of a baby daughter to take the place of another little girl, now five weeks dead, who will live forever in his heart.

Tears misted the Governor's eyes, and belied the happy smile on his lips, as he greeted his three children in the spacious study of his house in Fresh Pond Lane, Cambridge.

The smile broadened momentarily as he announced:

"I've got a great big secret."

"What is it? What is it?" chorused Betty, 12; Charles, Jr., 10, and Nancy, 5.

The governor held up both hands for silence and then said:

"You have a brand new baby sister."

Later, after the first gale of sudden excitement had dwindled to a laughing babble, the governor

House ways and means tax subcommittee approves drastic revision of capital gains tax to aid business.

Senate remains in grip of Southern filibuster against anti-lynching bill.

Senate and House agriculture committees work at drafting separate farm legislation.

House labor committee decides to press for immediate consideration of wage-hours bill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—Drastic modification of capital gains and loss tax provisions, eagerly sought by business, was approved today by the House Ways and Means tax subcommittee in conference with Treasury representatives.

The new system, sharply cutting rates on capital gains, reverses a three-year-old tax policy of the administration.

This decisive action came while the special session, only three days old, remained in the grip of confusion.

RESUME READING

At the Texan's direction, clerks resumed reading where they left off yesterday a 14-page speech by Justice Hugo L. Black. Black opposed anti-lynching legislation while serving as Senator from Alabama.

The House session started with an attack and defense of the wage-hour bill.

The House labor committee already had decided to press its effort to force the bill out of its pigeonhole in the rules committee.

In desultary debate on the floor, Representative Taber (R.) of New York said the legislation is "one of the most dangerous measures ever presented to the Congress of the United States."

Representative Ramspeck (D.) of Georgia replied with a defense of the creation and proposed operation of the wage board that would be set up by the measure.

Red Pole Campers Riding Floe South

MOSCOW, Nov. 17 (AP)—Four Russian Arctic campers, riding an ice floe down from the North Pole, reported by radio today that they were only about 125 miles off the northeastern coast of Greenland.

In Moscow, Dr. Otto Schmidt, leader of the aerial expedition that established the camp 13 miles from the Pole nearly six months ago, said the four men probably would be taken off in January, before their ice raft reached the open sea and danger of breaking up.

GEN. JOHNSON SAYS:

Well-Being of All Lies With Congress

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—Never has the well-being of workers, farmers, the middle classes and unemployed depended more certainly on what happens in Congress.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

This administration has done many things to restrict, rebuff and punish the flow of private capital into employment-making work.

Now, in the face of a threatened depression, the administration, speaking through both the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, seems to say that recovery and re-employments are dependent on restoring that flow—except that the President adds, "If private enterprise does not respond, government must take up the slack."

Private capital can't respond under recent policies and legislation. Neither can government take up the slack. Under a profit and capital system, capital can't work without reasonable unconfiscated profits.

The lag in turnover behind normal American activity is somewhere between twenty and thirty billions of private spending. Government can't take up that slack with four to five billions of ill-advised extravagance.

On the contrary, it was this same idea of government "taking up the slack," among others, that has prevented the flow of private capital.

* * *

Precisely what has happened—this new wave of unemployment and paralysis of enterprise was predicted over and over again by many authorities, among the least of which was this column.

Exactly what government now belatedly proposes to do, under threat of a severe economic recession, was suggested as a cure, week after week, month after month and year after year.

Up to very recently, this administration thought otherwise. It is shot through with people of great influence who still think otherwise. The great question is: "Is it really true that, regardless of the continued presence of these influential advisers, the administration's policy is reversed?"

Rescue from a new slump depends on the possibility of convincing this country that the answer to that question is unalterably "yes." It will not be convinced by words without deeds. The record of performance is all to the contrary.

Under our system the President proposes—Congress disposes. The answer lies not in what the administration says, but in what Congress does.

Just now, with every tick of the clock, more thousands of workers are being turned out to tramp the streets seeking work and frequently in vain.

Everybody, including the administration, now seems to be in at least partial agreement that the principal cause, not only for the present decline, but also in the long, stubborn lag of recovery in general, is due to punitive and restrictive measures toward capital.

It is a new emergency for the unemployed and change in these employment destroying measures should be first on the list.

* * *

The President's proposal does not put them there. It puts ahead of them a list of highly controversial measures, which move, if anywhere, in precisely the opposite direction.

That passes the duty of relieving this winter's suffering to Congress. The great leaders suddenly shifted into the spotlight are Senators Barkley and Harrison, and Representatives Bankhead, Doughton and Vinson, whose responsibility this emergency rest far more directly than on any others.

These men are the Democratic chieftains looked to, not only by their colleagues in Congress, but by the country, to give direction and force to this greatest "relief and recovery" drift since 1933.

If they succeed and, as many believe, an immediate and powerful upswing in business and employment should follow, they will deserve the thanks of the now threatened submerged third as well as of people of every class.

They can do more to restore jobs and decent living in one year than the whole alphabetical array has done in four years. If they fail, and this Congress at this critical crossroads degenerates into a new catfight, accomplishing nothing, there is no foreseeing the end of disaster to their party and their country.

Tobin in Talk With James Roosevelt

Plans Another Visit To Capital for Aid on Boston Problems

(Mayor-elect Tobin's address on the need of private contributions for public welfare will be heard over a national broadcast from 8:45 to 9:00 p. m. tonight.)

By JAMES F. DOOLING

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17—In the absence of his father who is still suffering from an infected tooth, James Roosevelt greeted Mayor-eelct Maurice J. Tobin of Boston at the White House today.

These two tall young men had several minutes of private conversation. Members of Mr. Tobin's party were in the executive coordinatro's room, but not listening.

It was established, however, at the end of the personal interview that Mayor-elect Tobin would undoubtedly return to the capital at the end of 10 days or so to see heads of the various federal departments. Mr. Roosevelt asked if he would.

Tobin's return will be for the purpose of solving the various problems that will confront him during 1938, when Mayor Mansfield relinquishes the reins of office and Boston's tax rate is being set.

JOBS REQUESTED

Two men, representing Boston navy yard employes, were also present at this conference. They are George Chamberlain and John F. Regan. They asked Mr. Roosevelt to use his influence to secure more work for Charlestown's mechanics. The younger Roosevelt reassured them that all work would be apportioned fairly.

At the same time, the delegates said that later they would confer with Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the U. S. Senate committee on naval affairs. Joseph Kelly of Dorchester, secretary of the Senator, was arranging this meeting.

Mayor-elect Tobin was a central figure in the nation's capital today, notwithstanding Congress' convention and all.

SIGNAL HONOR

He was signalled out of all the mayors and mayors-elect to a singular task tonight.

To push through to its goal the lagging community fund campaign of the nation's capital district, the 36-year-old executive from the Bay State will broadcast an appeal over 48 states tonight.

He didn't seek this task. In fact, he was rather unwilling to take the post of honor.

He was advised, however, that it was a duty—that he had achieved tremendous success for four years as Boston's chief campaigner for the community fund in Boston. (Maurice Tobin had worked on this project in Boston since its inauguration in 1932.)

TO SEE PRESIDENT

But this was only part of the program that confronted the newly-elected mayor this day.

As was forecast in the Boston Evening American, the problems of Boston's welfare and relief were to be taken up with the administration hierarchy.

Just before the closing session of the mayors' conference which is concluding a three-day seminar here, Tobin was to interview President Roosevelt and Public Works Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Both meetings had been postponed but they gave Boston's new executive more opportunity to check back on the studies he has been making. Boston's tax rate may be affected vitally as a result.

Mayor-elect Tobin is flying over the nation's capital tonight, broadcasting through special short-wave, to be transmitted by a national hookup, an appeal for the District of Columbia's citizens to give to the community fund.

There are a lot of mayors at this Hotel Mayflower convention. That, in itself, should be an explanation. Mayor-elect Tobin had not planned on playing any spectacular part in Washington.

According to his schedule he was to have left for New York tonight. But he was prevailed upon to revise his schedule.

PLANS RELIEF HERE

More important to him, however, than any honor that could be paid, was Tobin's desire to get a constructive program for Boston's relief program in 1938.

The present mayor, Frederick W. Mansfield, who has been host to Tobin, has been "more than co-operative" in this respect, Boston observers said.

The complete harmony between the two has been remarked many times in the mayoral campaign.

The committee which made the request of the young mayor-elect to broadcast this evening, comprised Roy Miller of the Washington Board of Trade; Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Community Chest; Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the mint and chairman of the government unit area in the community fund campaign; Lloyd B. Wilson and William Montgomery.

ABILITIES KNOWN

Director Earl Nash of the DC's community fund campaign said that the sponsors of the Washington drive were well aware of Mayor-elect Tobin's part in the community fund in Boston. In the past this has been oversubscribed in excess of its $3,000,000 goal. Last year it did better than the $4,000,000 sought.

Tonight Mayor-elect Tobin, after the conference banquet, met with Mayor Mansfield and Boston's welfare director, Patrick J. Moynihan, to go over the welfare situation at home in preparation for the visits with the national administrative chiefs.

Lynch Bill Provisions

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—The anti-lynching bill under discussion in the Senate provides:

That counties and municipalities shall be responsible for lynchings within their borders.

That such governmental subdivisions shall be liable to a lynching victim, or his next of kin, for a sum not exceeding $10,000.

That the subdivisions may offer as "affirmative defense" that the police officers in charge used all their powers to prevent the lynching.

That an officer who fails to make diligent effort to prevent a lynching may be fined to a maximum of $5000, imprisoned for five years or both.

'Trust-Busting' Cash Sought

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—Attorney-General Cummings revealed today he has asked the budget bureau for an additional $1,000,000 appropriation to be used in "trust-busting" activities.

Granting of the money by Congress would triple the funds now available for the Justice Department's anti-trust division under the direction of Assistant Attorney-General Robert Jackson.

Cummings estimated it costs the government $100,000 a year to prosecute large anti-trust cases.

"At present with our $472,000 appropriation we are considerably handicapped," he asserted. "The extra $1,000,000 would mean we could give adequate consideration to major cases involving monopolistic practices."

No 'President' For Garner!

Texan Bolts Senate To Escape "Boom"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—Vice-President John Vance Garner hurried from the Senate chamber today when a member of the body said he "would make a great President."

Senator Connally (D.) of Texas, continuing a filibuster againa the anti-lynching bill, remarked that the South had little chance of electing a President, but that Garner would make a good one.

Garner, listening to debate on the Senate floor, hurriedly arose and left the chamber, as Connally called after him:

"Don't let me run you out, Mr. President."

'Kidnap' Boy Home; Out Playing Hookey

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—A 14-year-old hookey-playing boy came home early today, ending an 8-state alarm sent out by federal agents after his parents expressed fear the boy had been kidnaped.

Weary from a day spent traveling about the city on subway and surface cars, the boy, Lawrence Goldworm, son of Matthew L. Goldworm, knitting goods company official, was surprised to find his home in an uproar over his disappearance.

O. K. Cut in Tax On Gains

with farming legislation. Secretary Wallace advised the Senate group to adopt a middle course between extreme compulsory control and voluntary control over farm production.

As approved by the House tax subcommittee, the new capital tax plan provides maximum tax rates on capital gains as follows:

1—If realized in first year, 100 per cent subject to individual income taxes as in present law.

2—At end of second year, top tax rate 30 per cent. Taxpayers can use individual income tax rate if it is less.

3—End of third year, top tax rate 25 per cent. Taxpayer has option of using individual income tax rates.

4—End of fourth year, top tax rate 20 per cent. Individual rate option still applies.

5—End of fifth year, top rate 16 per cent. Individual rate option still applies.

SEGREGATE GAINS, LOSSES

"We feel that this is a decided break for those taxable for capital gains," said Chairman Vinson (D.) of Kentucky of the subcommittee, with Under-secretary of Treasury McGill sitting at his side.

"We have segregated capital gains and losses into a class of income by itself in the event the taxpayer desires to so treat it. There will be a certainty of tax which is claimed to be very desirable."

Vinson said the subcommittee thought the plan would stimulate capital transactions so greatly that the Treasury will lose no revenue by the reduction in rates.

The discussion of the wages and hours measure in the House was followed by a castigation of the administration by Rrepresentative Fish (R.) of New York.

After futile efforts to gain recognition on the first two days of the session, Fish won the floor and accused the administration of responsibility for what he termed the current "Roosevelt depression."

In segregating capital gains for tax purposes, the sub-committee reverted to a system in effect for many years and changed by the New Deal.

Rigid provisions of present capital gains and tax laws have been blamed by economists for slowing up of trading in stocks, causing violent fluctuations in the stock market and making tax revenues unstable.

AIDS SMALL INVESTORS

Under the present law, individual income tax rates apply to capital gains. If stocks or other property are held for between one and two years and a gain is realized by sale, 80 per cent of the gain now is subject to the individual income tax rates. The tax is graduated down, until after 10 years 30 per cent is taxable.

While the new plan benefits rich taxpayers in the high surtax brackets, it will be much more helpful to those with medium or smaller incomes, Vinson explained. This is because those with lower income could apply the individual tax rates.

The system, he said, also benefits those with capital losses to apply against capital gains.

Roosevelt Calls Washington a 'Real Farmer'

Claims Father of U. S. Would Favor Aid To Agriculture

MOUNT VERNON, Va., Nov. 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that George Washington's career made it "almost certain" the first President would have favored present-day "government action to aid farmers."

Washington, Mr. Roosevelt said, showed by his own words "that he considered agricultural production even in his time to be much more than a local matter."

President Roosevelt's remarks were delivered to presidents of land grant colleges and universities gathered at Washington's home in connection with the 75th anniversary of the establishment of the agriculture department. Because the chief executive was confined to the White House with a tooth ailment, his remarks were read by Secretary Wallace.

FIRST "MASTER FARMER"

The President, calling Washington the first "master farmer," said:

"Knowing what we do of George Washington's belief in a national government strong enough to cope with the problems of his time, and his perception of the importance of agriculture as the foundation of our national life, we can be sure that if he had lived today he would have acted boldly to keep agriculture from going down to ruin.

"We can be sure that he would not have denied to agriculture advantages which government has so freely granted to industry. All his actions indicate that he would have supported farmers in programs of the type they have adopted.

BALANCED CROPS

"Just as he himself shifted from one-crop tobacco production to a balanced type of farming in order to save his soil, it seems almost certain that he would have favored government action to aid farmers as a group to bring their farming operations into balance. . . .

"Let us resolve that we will be worthy of his great example. Let us resolve that as a nation we will not neglect the fertility of our soil or the integrity of our farm homes. Let us resolve that, now and always, the great art of husbandry shall have its rightful place in our American life."

Although Washington considered agricultural production to be more than a local matter, Mr. Roosevelt said the first President could not possibly have foreseen many changes that were destined to take place.

RURAL URBAN TIEUP

Washington could not foresee, the chief executive said, that a protective tariff policy would put agriculture "at a permanent disadvantage" or how farm mortgages would be linked with life insurance policies held by millions of people in cities and towns.

He could not foresee, Mr. Roosevelt continued, that taxes, interest and freight rates would push thousands of farmers into bankruptcy or how abundant production would crush farmers under unmarketable surpluses.

Nor could Washington see ahead, the President added, to the development of great corporations and labor unions causing farmers to unite, or the intricate ties between rural and urban prosperity.

Yet, the nation's first chief executive, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, showed that nearly a century and a half ago he realized the wide scope of the agricultural problem.

43 CCC Youths Ill in Hospital

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 17 (AP)—Fort Ethan Allen Army Hospital today was taxed to capacity with 43 Civilian Conservation Corps workers suffering from trichonosis, traced by army physicians to eating pork which was not properly roasted.

Colonel Thomas Ferenbaugh, post surgeon, said the outbreak was one of the most severe in the history of army jurisdiction, but added all were expected to recover. The pork was served October 27.

Four extra nurses have been added to the post hospital staff to care for the men, all members of the 1134 company of the C. C. C. at Camp Smith, Waterbury.

Urge Cities Study Up On Home Needs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—A government economist urged today that every city measure its "market needs" in residential construction to help stabilize the building industry.

Lowell J. Chawner, chief of the Commerce Department's construction economic section, told the United States Chamber of Commerce's conference on residential construction that home building had proceeded in the past largely on a "trial and error" method.

Chambers of Commerce and other business groups, he said, should determine at intervals for their cities:

1—The number of properties vacant.

2—The number of families added to the city in a given year.

3—The distribution of these families by income levels.

"Without simple factual data such as these," he said, "the business of constructing homes and making other private real property improvements will remain pretty largely a venture in the dark."

The conference was called by the Chamber to determine the causes of the present recession in residential building, and what may be done to stimulate it.

Administration officials reported, meanwhile, that serious consideration was being given to proposals of reviving the home repair and modernization program abandoned by the Federal Housing Administration last spring.

During the two years the plan operated, the F. H. A. helped underwrite $560,000,000 worth of renovation loans.

'Making Up' Rumor Again Hit by Ryan

HICKORY, N. C., Nov. 17 (INS)—Basil A. (Pat) Ryan, grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan and heir to a copper fortune, today stuck by his heated denial that he plans a rendezvous with 21-year-old Martha Barkley Ryan, the wife he claims Carolina "corn"—not love—brought to him.

Ryan's declaration came in answer to rumors current here and in Morgantown that he would meet to make up with his wife, who at the time of her marriage was the unwed mother of a two-months-old son.

Vote to 'Stand Pat' on House Wage Bill

Labor Group Balks At Revising Measure

By WILLIAM S. NEAL

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—By a vote of 19 to 2 the House Labor committee decided today against recalling the wage-hours bill for revision.

Chairman Mary Norton (D.) of New Jersey said it was the consensus of the committee to "stand pat" on the measure with any possible changes to be made from the floor of the House.

The chairman said the committee would throw its strength behind a petition, introduced by Mrs. Norton, to force the bill out of the rules committee to the House floor.

Forty-four members signed the petition yesterday, and when the House reconvened today approximately 25 additional members lined up to attach their names. A discharge petition requires 218 signatures. Mrs. Norton predicted they would be obtained "within a few days unless there are a lot of fibbers about."

AMENDMENTS ON FLOOR

She said the committee might have amendments to the measure should it reach the floor, but added: "We discussed nothing today about that."

No leaders of organized labor or governmet officials have proposed any change to the committee, she added.

Meantime, Rep. Rayburn of Texas, Democratic leader, expressed hope that the measure could be brought up under regular procedure. He said he would wait a few days before signing the petition.

Southern Democratic members of the rules committee continued to assail the measure.

"I was opposed to the bill last summer and I think my position has been strengthened since that time," said Rep. Clark (D) of North Carolina. "There has been a great reaction against the measure."

LIBERAL ASKS ACTION

Rep. Maverick (D) of Texas, a leader of the Liberal bloc, called for militant action on the wage-hours measure.

"It was held up and blocked by the (House) rules committee of the Democratic party last session," he said. "This was a solemn promise of the Democratic party, a party pledge—but the Democratic rules committee would not let its own Democratic congressmen vote on it. It seems to me that the Democratic party had better face party responsibility and its duty and promises."

Senator Berry (D) of Tennessee, a national labor union leader, was understood to be conferring with House opponents of the Black-Connery measure in an effort to have the law contain definite wage and hour standards.

Debs, Civic Leaders Attends Opening At Colonial

Boston went definitely Hollywood last night at the opening of the new Samuel Goldwyn motion picture, "The Hurricane," at the Colonial Theater.

Sputtering Kleig lights turned Boylston street into a replica of an Eastern Hollywood boulevard as a jostling, good-humored crowd jammed the sidewalks to watch society satellites and civic bigwigs arrive for the premier.

Flashing camera bulbs set off as photographers "shot" the arriving celebrities, highlighted the already brilliantly illuminated lobby and added to the general festivity and holiday atmosphere of the scene.

Top-hatted males and gorgeously-jewelled women gave the wise-cracking spectators a vicarious thrill and everybody was satisfied but the street cleaners who had to contend with the resulting debris this morning.

"MUTINY" AUTHORS

The film, starring Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour, was written by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of the well-remembered "Mutiny on the Bounty." Like their previous success, the writers chose the South Pacific as the location for the cause of last night's festivities.

Among the first to arrive at the theater were Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, Judge Wilford D. Gray and Judge Abraham Pinanski.

Miss Elizabeth Hovey, daughter of Chandler Hovey, who owns the America's Cup defender Rainbow, and is commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club, led a large delegation of society beauties who took in the showing. The blonde and lovely Miss Hovey was accompanied by a party of friends.

United Artists, distributors of the film, was represented by Thomas Spry, who acted as host at a dinner party before curtain time.

SOCIETY FOLK THERE

Marjorie Saltonstall of Milton escorted by Forbes Perkins, Jr., a Harvard undergraduate, Mark Byron, Edward Byron and others of the younger set were also present.

Among those strolling about the lobby before the showing was Forrester A. Clark, socialite poloist, who was accompanied by Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Frederick L. Ames, society concert singer, svelte in a tailored black costume with a bright yellow Ascot scarf.

A constant member of local opening night audiences, Mrs. William A. Gaston was surrounded by a group of prominent members of Boston's "400" when she arrived at the theater.

Among them were Mrs. Horace Morison of Louisburg square, Mrs. Ronald Lyman, Mrs. Daniel de Menocal; Mrs. Augusta Rantoul; Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Seabury and Mr. and Mrs. James J. Storrow, Jr.

MRS. ORCUTT IN BLACK

One of the notable figures of the evening was Mrs. Willian Dana Orcutt, who was resplendent in a black gown brightened by a trimming of sparkling gold sequins and a heavy gold necklace. She was accompanied by Mr. Orcutt.

Arriving at the same time were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. G. Thorndike of Dedham. Mrs. Thorndike was striking in a royal blue evening wrap enhanced with a silver brocade scarf.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Claflin of Brookline were among the others who attended the first performance.

It was a brilliant outpouring, rivalling as a spectacle any opening this city has ever seen, observers agreed.

Quins Have Half Million, Never Want a Cent

Costs $1600 to $1800 Monthly to Maintain Famous Sisters

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Dionne quintuplets have a half million dollars in liquid assets, Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, their medical guardian, said today.

And at three years and five months, they care nothing at all about money—never ask for a nickel or dime.

Dr. Dafoe, here for a vacation, said it might be more than ten years before they reach the millionaire stage, "because their expenses will be greater from now no."

At the end of their first year, the quintuplets had $8000 in the bank. Their assets are invested in bonds in the Province of Ontario.

They not only are self-supporting, but contribute $100 a month to their family, and in three or four years, probably will pay for a school to be built on their nursery ground.

It costs between $1600 and $1800 a month to maintain the five girls, their nursery and staff, Dr. Dafoe said.

This includes the salary of two nurses, one teacher, a housekeeper, two maids, three guards for the grounds and a janitor. Dr. Dafoe draws a salary of $200 a month as medical guardian.

Mamma and Papa Dionne and the other six children will have Christmas dinner with the quins, but there'll be no turkey for the five sisters—no ice cream or candy.

They've never tasted these dainties. Their nearest approach to ice cream has been frozen mousse.

Dr. Dafoe said one or two of the sisters had "a few doubts" about Santa Claus, because they pulled off his whiskers last year and thought they recognized him.

He's bought his Christmas gift for them—a white pottery plaque of the Virgin and Child.

$2,040,412 Cut Off Curtis Estate Tax

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—The Board of Tax Appeals ruled today the estate of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, need not pay a $2,040,412 deficiency in income taxes.

Bride Grasps At Gun, Dies

ELLSWORTH, Me., Nov. 17 (AP)—A bride of five months, Mrs. Beverly Carr Sinclair, 19, lost her life, police reported today, when she grasped a shotgun her husband had aimed at a partridge yesterday.

The shooting occurred in Steuben. The pellets penetrated Mrs. Sinclair's stomach.

Medical Examiner C. C. Knowlton said the shooting was accidental. The official said Horace G. Sinclair, 21, the husband, was about to fire at the bird when the wife thoughtlessly grasped the weapon.

Death came several hours later in an Ellsworth hospital.

100 Families Flee Wakefield Fire

The Wakefield Sawdust Company plant today was destroyed in a spectacular blaze which aroused hundreds of Wakefield families and drew help from Reading, Melrose and Stoneham.

Flames shot high in the air from the large wooden structure, carrying embers to nearby buildings and the Italian Baptist Church, but 75 yards from the blaze.

More than 100 families living nearby left their homes while firemen from adjoining towns wet down buildings to halt spread of the fire.

Find Missing Mother of 4

Mrs. Bertha Albano, 26-year-old mother of four children, reported missing from her home in Winter street, Somerville, was found today by Officer Denis McCarthy of the Joy street police station.

"I've been losing all my husband's money at beano and I was afraid to go home," McCarthy said she confessed to him after she had approached him in Beacon street to ask directions.

She was persuaded to return home.

Urge Big Planes To Replace Ships

Maritime Commission Sees Day of Ocean Super-Liners Gradually Fading

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—American shipping companies should replace super ocean liners with luxurious flying boats, the U. S. Maritime Commission told Congress today.

Listing advantages of sea aircraft over surface vessels, the commission recommended legislation that would give it jurisdiction over trans-oceanic air operations.

Expressing a preference for heavier-than-air ships rather than for dirigibles, the commission predicted that large flying boats capable of carrying from 40 to 150 passengers, eventually may supersede such expensive luxury liners as the Queen Mary, the Normandie and the George Washington.

"Thirty years have elapsed since the old Mauretania established its Atlantic record of five days and two hours," the commission reported.

CROSS IN 20 HOURS

"The Normandie has succeeded in lowering that time by only 24 hours. Even if the horsepower of the Normandie were doubled—at prohibitive expense—the time of crossing would be reduced by only 11 hours.

"Yet flying boats, in their present stage of development, promise a non-stop trip to Europe in 20 hours, while dirigibles have made the crossing repeatedly in 48 hours.

"The comfort to be offered in trans-oceanic aircraft appears to be equal that of a Pullman train and is not inferior to that offered by competing forms of transportation."

The commission estimated it now costs a huge ocean liner $67 and a dirigible $131 to transport a passenger. In 10 years the airliner will be able to operate in oceanic service at an expense of $35 per passenger.

109,500 A YEAR

According to the commission's calculations, six 250,000-pound flying boats can carry 109,500 passengers a year at an estimated construction cost of $19,700,000. A superliner, costing $50,000,000, can carry only 96,000 passengers a year.

"It is believed that American vessel owners should not build super-liners, but they might well give attention in the field of high-speed passenger and express transportation to trans-oceanic aircraft," the commission said.

As a means of stimulating the development of trans-oceanic aeronautical operations, the commission suggested the federal government construct several large flying boats and charter them to private operators.

As an alternative, the commission favored granting loans up to 75 per cent of cost for construction of such ships by private interests.

The commission withheld any recommendations regarding new dirigible construction. It called on the Navy Department, however, to investigate fruther the national defense value of lighter-than-air craft.

Copeland to Press Maritime Act Study

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—Thorough study of the maritime act to eliminate what he called "disgraceful" labor practices on American ships, and to facilitate the merchant marine construction program, was begun today by Senator Royal S. Copeland (D.) of New York, chairman of the commerce committee.

Calling for speedy action, Copeland, sponser of the maritime act, said he would prepare a list of far-reaching amendments for "prompt consideration by the Congress."

The majority of amendments will consist of those stricken from the Copeland bill during its consideration in the Senate, and proposals outlined in the "economic survey" of the merchant marine by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

"I am of the opinion," Copeland stated, "that under no condition should we permit American ships to be constructed in foreign yards.

"It is our duty to see that our own shipyards are kept busy, and that our own workers receive the experience of construction that will give us an army of skilled workers in times of emergency."

Santosuosso Quizzed In City's $50,000 Suit

day when Curley was on the stand.

Under McClennan's questioning, Santosuosso said he omitted answering some of the interrogatories partly on advice of counsel and partly because he saw no reason for helping the city's case.

"Did you believe those answers would help make out my case?" he was asked by Attorney McClennen.

"I thought so," the witness replied.

It was brought out that in answering interrogatories, the witness had denied discussing the General Equipment case and the Finance Commission probe after the case had been settled.

TELLS OF GRAVES' TALK

Today, however, Santosuosso said Graves came to the witness' office and they walked together to City Hall, where Graves was to testify before the Finance Commission.

"Graves said to me, 'There is nothing for me to say but the truth,'" Santosuosso testified. "I asked him when he intended to go again and I said, 'I will be there.'"

He testified he did not consider this conversation a discussion of the case and that is why he did not include it in the interrogatories answered.

Q—In November or December, 1933, did Graves tell you what he did with the $30,000? A—Not in November or December, 1933, but he told me what he was going to do.

JUDGE MAKES COMMENT

Attorney McClennen objected to the last part of this answer, declaring that Santosuosso, through his long experience as a lawyer, should know how to answer questions.

When Santosuosso explained that he was merely attempting to "clarify the situation," Judge Fosdick commented:

"Many another witness has tried to clarify the situation, but he should not do it."

Both Santosuosso and Curley denied on the witness stand yesterday that the former mayor and governor had received $30,000 from the General Equipment suit settlement, as sworn to in a deposition signed by Graves.

In quiet tones, at first hardly audible in the rear of the courtroom, Curley denied he ever received a single penny of the $30,000 check.

MAKES GENERAL DENIAL

During his appearance on the witness stand, his voice gradually rose to its usual vibrancy as he outlined his connection with the case. He denied he was influenced in officially authorizing the settlement by anything except the advice of his corporation counsel, Samuel A. Silverman.

He denied the settlement was the result of a conspiracy in which he was to have a financial reward.

He denied finally that he had ever known or knew today Frederick Graves, whose desposition claims that an agreement was reached with the former Boston mayor at a meeting in Washington in 1933.

BEST INTERESTS OF CITY

He said the suit had been settled in the best interests of the city and because he felt that the city stood to lose a greater sum if action were to be allowed to continue its way in the courts. Quite whimsically he observed:

"The city's always rather a poor litigant in court. It has no funds with which to employ members of the jury."

After the mayor's testimony, Attorney Santosuosso took the stand to explain in detail how arrangements for the settlement came about. He explained carefully that he had agreed to the $85,000 payment, keeping $20,000 for a fee.

He said Graves had requested the rest of the money which the city had turned over to be made out in the checks for $30,000, $20,000 and $15,000. He said he had aided Graves to cash the $30,000 check by introducing him at a bank. The rest of the money, he said, was given to Graves and he had no knowledge of where it went afterward.

His answer was "no" to a question as to whether he had ever told Graves the $30,000 was going to Curley.

Watch Suspect In Hospital Bed

John M. Mahoney, roving seafarer accused of holding up Arthur Canzano, filling station attendant, robbing him of $68 and the attempting to kidnap him, is in Boston City Hospital today, a police guard at his side.

Mahoney, who police said fired a shot at his victim before forcing the latter to drive him away in a car parked in the gas station at Eliot and Stuart streets, was captured soon after the alleged holdup.

He was taken to Warren avenue station, where he confessed the holdup, according to police, and then to police headquarters, where he is said to have admitted six robberies in various cities.

He later was taken back to the Warren avenue station to await court. He was found soon after unconscious on the floor of his cell, suffering from bronchitis and an infected jaw.

Film Executive Charges 'Frameup' by Party Girl

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17 (INS)—George Auerbach, former film studio executive, testified that he was hit on the head with a telephone by a young woman who tore off part of her clothing and attempted to place him in a compromising position.

Auerbach, former executive of the B. P. Schulberg studio, was called in Superior Court to testify in his wife's demand for temporary alimony of $1,000 a month pending trial of a divorce action.

Attorneys for the wife, who is Helen Coburn of the films, asked that the court deny the father any contact whatever with the couple's two children, on the grounds Auerbach is an "unfit person."

It was to sustain this latter charge that the wife's attorneys questioned Auerbach regarding a "scandalous episode" at the studio several months ago. Auerbach said:

"I was at a Hollywood cafe. It was about 1:30 a. m. I had separated from my wife two days before. The young lady with me became very intoxicated. There was a man there who said he was her brother.

"Late in the evening I took the younk woman to the studio because I didn't want her brother to see her in an intoxicated condition. Soon after we got to the studio she passed out. I went into another room for some cold water. When I returned she was standing by a window with half her clothing torn off, screaming.

"I knew if I laid a hand on her, she would sue me. I tried to get away, but before I could she struck me on the head with the telephone."

Judge Goodwyn Knight ordered that the father should be allowed to visit his two children pending the divorce.

Chance for All To Do Share for Basket Fund

Hurry, Goodfellows, Help Spread Cheer On Christmas

She is a mother, struggling against the handicap of grinding poverty, struggling to get enough food to keep her family alive, enough clothing even to cover them.

She has another and equally difficult burden—that of keeping a crippled husband out of the despondency that frequently envelops him in the realization that he can do so little to aid, and in the mistaken thought that he is a dead weight.

The husband and father has lost one arm. On his remaining hand are but four fingers.

JOY IN GIVING

In a pitiful letter to the editor of the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund, she asks timidly for "whatever donation it is deemed befits us."

There should be medals and decorations for a mother as courageous as this—but she, and her children and her crippled husband could not eat decorations.

What will you do, Goodfellows, about this discouraged family and about hundreds of other discouraged families, hopeful that a kind Providence will furnish them at least a dinner on Christmas Day?

There are two ways in which you can do something.

Send in your contribution to the Christmas Basket Fund.

Or send in for the address of a family, or the addresses of two or three families and provide them with Christmas baskets direct.

MAKE OTHERS GLAD

As long as you help it doesn't make any difference how you help. Whether you can give five cents or $500. Whether you look after one person or a dozen families. There is joy in giving to make others happy.

Here is another letter, one from another mother:

"I am writing you at this time in regard to asking your aid in receiving a Christmas basket for my children, if it is possible, or any aid that you could give us at Xmas time.

"I have three children going to school, one girl, age 8, two boys age 9 and 11, also my father who is very old and unable to work again, and a sick husband now waiting to enter a sanatorium for his health.

"A basket or help would be a Godsend to me, as we are on welfare and getting further in debt all the time.

"May God bless you and your good work, as I was at one time able to help you myself."

THEY DON'T FORGET

They don't forget—those people who have been aided in the past by the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

But there are so many others—perhaps you yourself—who, never having known the scourge of grinding poverty, the chill of a bare home that wracks to the bone, cannot realize that such conditions exist.

It would be a revelation if these people could be along when Christmas baskets are being delivered.

Therefore, these messages of heartache cannot go unanswered at Christmas time. And the time is so short that action by the more fortunate must be prompt if the needy and worthy are to be lifted, even briefly, out of their discouragement.

Send your contributions to the fund NOW. Address them to the Christmas Basket Fund Editor, Boston Evening American, 13 Otis street, Boston. This is practically in Winthrop square, adjoining the Evening American-Sunday Advertiser building.

ONLY TO NEEDY

In connection with applications for baskets—which should be addressed the same way—the applicants are instructed to obtain the endorsement of their priest, minister, rabbi, children's school teacher or family doctor.

It is almost inconceivable that any but the needy and deserving would try to obtain baskets, thus depriving the hungry of food. But such things happen, and thus the editor asks that applicants get these endorsements.

Applicants should also write their names and addresses plainly and they should be sure to include the number of persons in the family. This is most important.

Peace Society Head Lauds INS For Pact Story

Declares Amazing Expose Is Worth National Prize

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (INS)—Public recognition of Internationa News Service for its service t peace in disclosing the now famou "Balfour document" in article written by William K. Hutchinso was advocated today by Worl Peaceways.

Hutchinson, a Washington sta correspondent for Internationa News Service obtained the secr document after it had lain for 2 years in the archives of the Sta Department.

Estelle M. Sternberger, executi director of World Peaceways, o of the most influential peace o ganizations, wrote:

"If there were an America peace prize I am convinced tha the country would unanimousl agree that it should be conferr upon the International Nev Service for the year 1937, for i revelation of the Balfour doc ment.

"I know of no action taken b an American citizen or by a group of American citizens tha is calculated to save us from th dangers of war involvements i Europe or in Asia, which can b compared with this service i publishing this revelation of th International News Service."

Fear Bombings, Americans in Huchow Flee

Two Believed Still in Changshu, Now Under Attack

SHANGHAI, Nov. 17 (AP)—A group of American missionaries today left Huchow, Chekiang province city 150 miles southwest of Shanghai, because of fears that the city might be bombarded by Japanese airplanes.

The American consulate had no word from two Americans believed only remaining in Changshu, now under attack.

Southern Methodist missionaries in Changchow, in the path of the Japanese advance, evacuated for Nanking.

The embassy was informed by Clarence E. Gauss, American consul in Nanking, that 45 Americans intended to remain in Nanking despite the general exodus. Americans still in Nanking include Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and his staff.

NANKING, Nov. 17 (AP)—Rear Admiral Edward J. Marquart, commander of the United States Yangtze River patrol, sped toward Nanking today from Hankow on board his flagship, the gunboat Luzon, to give any necessary aid to the American embassy and to Americans here.

The United States gunboat Oahu also was on its way to Nanking to join the Panay, the only gunboat in Nanking Harbor.

Would Let People Cast Vote on War

New Laws Are Favored in Congress As Result of Pact Revelations

secret territorial deals during the World War.

LaFollette declared publication of the Balfour document provided a "clinching argument" for taking the war-making power from Congress and the President and lodging it with the American people themselves.

The LaFollette and Ashbrook proposals also would give the people the right to vote on conscription of men for military service overseas.

Thus, if written into the Constitution, the American people would vote "aye" or "no" on these two questions, submitted to them by Congress in a national referendum:

Declares People Should Vote on Going Into War

1. Shall the United States declare war on (the enemy nation)?

2. Shall the Congress be authorized to conscript men for military service overseas?

LaFollette declared there was "no more momentous decision" confronting a democracy than a declartiaon "to wage war abroad."

He insisted revelation of European intrigue in the World War made it imperative the people "who are going to do the dying and suffering and paying" ought to determine such an issue.

"The character of war has changed since the Constitution was drawn," LaFollette added. "It has become a conflict between whole nations involving the suspension of almost every constitutional guarantee and liberty. The power originally given to Congress to declare war was not expected to involve the sending of millions of men overseas.

"Nor was it expected to involve the complete transformation of a democracy into a military state, as it does today.

"Before any such vital change takes place, the people who are going to do the dying and suffering and paying ought to have a right to vote."

All Americans Willing To Defend Nation at Home

LaFollette explained that if the North American continent (including Caribbean nations) were invaded by any foreign foe, his amendment would not apply—and Congress would retain the right to declare war.

In announcing he would offer a proposed amendment, calling for a referendum on foreign wars, Capper said:

"I believe I am representing the wishes of almost every organized farm group in the United States, as well as of the overwhelming majority of the people of the whole country in introducing this proposal.

"Every man in the nation will jump to arms in case the United States is ever invaded or threatened with invasion.

"But when it comes to wars overseas, the American people believe they have as much right to pass on their participation in such wars as Congress does, and I agree.

"Before the boys from Kansas or anywhere else in the United States, are conscripted to die in Asia's swamps or in European ditches, the people will, under this amendment, have had the chance to vote 'Yes' or 'No'."

Capper declared the American people were just as competent to decide "whether American boys are to die abroad" as they were to elect members of Congress.

He called attention to the cost of the World War upon American citizens and declared the people were the ones "who will have to pay with their lives and tatxes for the next war."

Warning to Nation Seen In Pacts by Roy O. West

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 (INS)—Roy O. West, former Secretary of the Interior, today characterized as "important and startling" disclosures of the secret "Balfour document" made by International News Service in articles written by William K. Hutchinson.

The document, as uncovered by Hutchinson, reveals to the public for the first time that the Allied Powers had secret treaties dividing up the spoils of the World War prior to America's entry in 1917.

The former cabinet member declared:

"The report to the British Council made in the spring of 1917, now for the first time made public, is a startling and important disclosure.

"It reminds us again that blood, treasure and unpaid foreign debts should not be forgotten and of the importance of the avoidance by us at any time of any foreign entanglements whatsoever.

"It emphasizes anew the unmistakeable soundness of George Washington to the people of this country."

150,000 Chinese Troops Thrown In War Breach

Desperate Attempt To Halt Japan's Grim Advance

SHANGHAI, Nov. 17 (INS)—Hurling 150,000 reinforcements into the fray, China suddenly reorganized her defenses today in a desperate attempt to halt Japan's offensive and save endangered Nanking.

The move was launched even as officials of the central government began abandoning the menaced capital for the interior.

One reliable report said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, military dictator, intended to resign from his post as premier and devote all his time and energies to commanding his armed forces.

The huge army of fresh Chinese troops, all well equipped with arms, arrived at Nanking and marched eastward to man a 90-mile battle line running from Hupuko to Chapo, where the Chinese will make a determined stand.

These troops, which came from Szechuan province, will replace the forces which originally battled the invaders on the Shanghai front.

Meanwhile, Chinese officials, anticipating Japanese attempts to break the protective boom in the Yangtze river at Kiangyin, were reported to have constructed another near Chinkiang. They have also mined the river to ward off attacks by Japanese warships.

Japanese authorities claimed the vanguard of their troops advancing westward from Shanghai was within 11 miles of Soochow, bomb-wrecked "Paradise Under Heaven" which is the vital center of the defenders' main defense line.

China Casualties 800,000 Is Estimate

SHANGHAI, Nov. 17 (INS)—In the first authoritative neutral statement on the subject, an international Red Cross representative here today estimated that China has suffered the immense total of 800,000 casualties to date in her war with Japan.

The estimate covered four months and one week of hostilities on all fronts. The Red Cross representative made no estimate of the Japanese casualties, figures on which are closely guarded by the Japanese officials. But, unofficial estimates of the Japanese dead and wounded in the conflict thus far range from 100,000 up to 200,000.

Gen. Chiang Pledges Resistance to End

NANKING, Nov. 17 (INS)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in a statement to International News Service today vowed that China would never surrender to the Japanese invasion which he termed "the prelude to a mad scheme for world domination."

China's "iron man," confronting the darkest hours of his career as Japanese armies from Shanghai advance on Nanking, declared:

"We owe it to ourselves and to posterity, as well as to our civilization of 4000 years, to meet Japan's ruthless attacks on our national existence with all the resources at our comamnd."

Supreme War Board Created in Tokyo

TOKYO, Nov. 17 (INS)—Indicating Japan's absolute determination to fight China to a standstill, Emperor Hirohito today gave his imperial sanction to establishment of the long-awaited "imperial headquarters" for duration of the conflict.

The new headquarters, which is expected to begin functioning almost immediately, will virtually displace the cabinet and take over supreme control of the campaign in China.

Under the supervision of the emperor, the new system will put Japan under virtual control of the military clique and on a complete war footing. Resort to this measure is believed to indicate that Japanese authorities consider the hostilities in China will continue for a consderable time.

Hospital in Quest For Perfect Child

A contest to find the perfect boy or girl, aged 6 to 10 years, today was announced by the Massachusetts Osteopathic Hospital.

Easy Boys, No Hurry

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—The geological survey informed Secretary Ickes today that the job of making a topographical map of the United States—begun in 1875—is nearly half done.

Franco Rushes Airport Work

Will Assist Planned Aragon Offensive

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 17 (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco was reported today to be rushing construction of airports behind the Aragon, or northeastern, Spanish front to assist his prospective major offensive eastward.

The newest base for the insurgent aerial armada was said to be located at Tudela, west of the Tudela-Pamplona highway. Others were scattered along the vast battlefront from the French frontier to the mountains of Cuenca Province, more than 200 miles to the south.

Insurgent sources predicted Franco would combine his offensive on the Aragon front with a drive on Almeria, a Mediterranean port at the southern end of the territory held by the republican government.

The strategic significance of Almeria lay in its proximity to Moroccan territory. Franco would be able to use it in event he brought fresh Moroccan reinforcements from Africa for a drive up the coast toward Valencia and Barcelona.

Husking Bee Marks Drive in Newton

A husking bee for more than 1000 workers at West Newton Armory marked the near completion of the $192,305 Community Chest Campaign quota. A. Leslie Harwood, campaign director, announced that 98 per cent of the quota has been reached.

Valera Seeking New Election In February

Needs Clear Majority In Dail, Aide Says, To Get Results

DUBLIN, Nov. 17 (AP)—Minister of Commerce Sean Lemass hinted today that President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State is planning a general election to seek a clear majority in the Dail.

An extraordinary meeting of all political parties has been called to consider the election, which may be held in February.

Lemass told a private meeting of Fianna Fail, suporters of De Valera, that the present minority of one in the Dail caused a situation in which "very little of value can be attempted and nothing carried into effect without great difficulty."

Minister of Posts Oscar Traynor said:

"We haven't a working majority. It may be necessary to ask the people for it."

The last general elections, July 1, gave De Valera 9 members, Cosgrave 48, Labor 13 and Independents 8. Since then one De Valera adherent has died.

ELSIE ROBINSON, writes from the woman's viewpoint, discusses everyday affairs and problems, regularly in the Boston American.

Roosevelt's Vote Won His Election

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP)—Cecil Marshall, Democrat, said today after a recount he was much obliged to President Roosevelt—and 1097 other citizens—for electing him highway supervisor by one vote over Levi Sprague, Republican.

Since the President cast his vote here, it was easy for Marshall to see he needed the Chief Executive's vote, as well as the others.

sat down with the children in a corner of the room.

"IMAGE OF SALLY"

Now only a father again, his thoughts turned back to eight-year-old Sally and her long, brave battle against death.

Ruth Smith, the nurse who kept night-long vigil at Mrs. Hurley's bedside, and who was in attendance at Sally's birth, entered the room. Walking swiftly to the governor's side, she said:

"She's just the image of Sally."

The governor looked up. "Isn't it wonderful?" he said.

"This is our compensation. No one will ever know the ordeal Mrs. Hurley must have gone through during the illness and passing away of Sally.

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

"It was a great strain on both of us. But everybody was so kind. We were given a marvelous demonstration of the kindliness of everyone in the state.

"Thank God, she will be home again for Christmas. She loves Christmas with the children. She is a real mother. She loves her children. She loves her home. We are all very happy."

The governor paused on the word "happy." He flicked a tear from his eye.

(Death and life; life and death, always in unending succession.)

6 POUNDS 12 OUNCES

During the first burst of jubilation that followed the governor's announcement to the children, all three crowded around the telephone to call Wyman House in Cambridge Hospital.

There they learned that the new Miss Hurley weighed 6 pounds 12 ounces, and that mother and baby were doing fine.

Betty, turning to her father, said:

"Oh, father, I'm so glad I have a baby sister."

Charles re-echoed his father's words:

"Daddy, isn't it wonderful."

KIDDING, SAYS NANCY

Nancy, her father's "little rip," tossed her golden curls and declared:

"Stop, daddy, you're kidding."

Mrs. Hurley's condition was so improved she was able to telephone from the hospital and personally direct the other three children's preparations for school.

Later, in the State House, Governor Hurley was showered with felicitations as he passed out cigars with a lavish hand and tried to fix his mind on affairs of state.

The baby was born shortly before 10 o'clock last night, with Dr. Frederick L. Good, chief obstetrician of Boston City Hospital, in attendance.

The birth was announced only a few minutes after Mrs. Hurley had been hurried to the hospital. The joyful news came after the governor had paced the living room floor like any other expectant father.

Healey Resolution To Hit Shoe Treaty

A resolution, condemning any reciprocal tariff treaty affecting the New England shoe industry, will be introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Arthur D. Healey, it was learned today.

Healey, assured by physicians that his son, Arthur D., Jr., was making satisfactory progress against lobar pneumonia, left for Washington today. He said New England business recovery depended upon amendment of the surplus profits tax, minimum wage and maximum hour law and protection of the shoe industry.

Food Expert Likes His Cookies

Motive Unknown In Suicide

Friends and relatives were at a loss today to explain the suicide of Richard De Blois Boardman, 59, found fatally wounded in his automobile in the driveway of his summer home at Marblehead Neck.

He was taken to Mary A. Alley Hospital, Marblehead, where he died four hours later. "Suicide by firearms" was the official report of Medical Examiner Ignatius Zielinski.

Boardman, who lived on Newbury street, Back Bay, was graduated from Harvard in 1900 and shortly afterwards went into the real estate business in Boston. In February, 1911, he formed a partnership with T. Dennie Boardman. During his career he was associated with the promotion and building of many of the largest mercantile, office and hotel buildings in the city.

He was a well known yachtsman and once was commodore of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

A regrettable error in one edition of yesterday's Boston Evening American resulted in publication of a number of copies of the paper stating that Reginald de Blois Boardman was the man found wounded.

The mistake resulting from a similarity of names was immediately corrected. The Boston Evening American takes this opportunity of expressing its regret and correcting any erroneous impression which might still exist.

AFL-CIO Postpone Parley Resumption

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—Resumption of the peace negotiations between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, scheduled to reopen tomorrow, was postponed until Monday, Nov. 29.

In making the anouncement today, A. F. of L. headquarters said the postponement was necessitated by absence from Washington of some of the conferees on union business.

Hub Home of Good Food, Says Famed Gourmet

Boston is the only city in the United States where there is an appreciation of the art of eating.

And eating is just that—an art—according to the world's foremost gourmet, Andre L. Simon of 6 Little Russell street, London, here as the guest of the socially-prominent E. Sohier Welches at their beautiful home, 20 Louisburg square.

A chubby man, in his 60's, with a red face and bristling white hair and moustache, the world's authority on eating is the founder of all the food and wine societies in the world and edits the international magazine, Food and Wine.

He says he has "nothing to sell save his enthusiasm" for what he had made his life work, eating and drinking. Says he:

WHAT GOES INSIDE

"If a woman spends one hour putting on clothes that adorn her body she might give 10 minutes' thought a day to what goes inside the body. That is much more important. Bad dress makes somebody look funny; but bad food and drink makes them feel funny.

"We've got to eat. Then, when it is something we have to do every day, why not make it a hobby? We can get pleasure out of it."

Aim of the society which he heads is to increase the interest of the general public in what they eat and drink; to pass more time at it, spend less money, get better value and better health.

He started it five years ago. Now there are branches in Boston, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

WINE IS ANSWER

His idea is that everyone should take greater pains over their eating and drinking.

And he thinks the answer to really proper eating is wine.

He says:

"You know how the average person bolts food. Washes it down with a glass of water. That is where wine comes in. It retards the pace of the meal. There is a bottle opened, there is pouring, there is something to talk about and it increases the interest in the meal. It makes the meal more of an occasion.

"It does not have to be dear wine—you can get a good bottle of wine for 75 cents or $1.

"Instead of keeping the druggists going with pills and medicines, wine will do the trick.

AIM TO RAISE TASTE

"Wine supplies the necessary acids to split up the fats and starches in food in a natural and gentle action differing from the pills and medicines."

He says that his clubs are "missionary societies" to save people from the mistakes of diet and to bring an end to "horse to nose bag" monotony of dining by making it amusing at no more cost and with additional pleasures to life.

The Welch cook, Frida Reymerth, a Norwegian, who holds the coveted medal and diploma of the Club des Arts Gastronomiques for excellence in the culinary art, was lauded by Mr. Simon for the excellence of her dishes.

But he says that his mission is more to raise the taste of "the ordinary person" just as museums do it with pictures.

He concluded:

HARMONY OF EATING

"Eating as an art, as much as painting, sculpture and literature. It is the art of proper harmony between flavors and savors—between liquids and solids.

"Boston, of course, has the greatest eating and drinking traditions. It is here alone in the United States where the best food is eaten and the best wines drunk. More along the English tradition. Because people have lived in the same homes for three or four generations and know the art of good living.

"In the north of England, in Lancashire, you will find the nearest approach to Boston abroad. Then in the villages of France."

Louisburg square, in Boston, is the only place in America, he says; it is traditional America itself.

He leaves tomorrow for New York after a dinner, tonight, in the home of the Beacon Hill Charles Codmans.

4000 Face Job Loss in Auto Sit-Strike

75 Foundry Workers 'Rest'; Shortage of Parts Loom

DETROIT, Nov. 17 (AP)—Seventy-five employes in the foundry department of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. began a sit-down strike today, and company officials said a resultant parts shortage might close the entire plant, throwing 4000 persons out of work.

The company said the strikers were in the foundry core room. It attributed the strike to a wage dispute.

Officers of the United Automobile Workers Union disclaimed knowledge of the strike, which, they said, was not authorized.

It was the second interruption in a General Motors plant since the U. A. W. rejected a proposed new agreement with General Motors Sunday. That rejection cancelled a guarantee given by the union in September against "wildcat" strikes.

Employes of the Fisher Body division plant at Pontiac, closed by a strike Monday night, resumed work this morning while UAW representatives conferrel with company officials on a union demand for reinstatement of 450 men who had been laid off.

Proceeding also with its Ford Motor Company organization campaign, the union planned distribution of a "Ford edition" of its newspaper at gates of the company's River Rouge plant.

Richard I. Frankensteen, assistant UAW president, who was one of several union men beaten in an attempt to distribute literature there on May 26, said the city of Dearborn had promised protection today.

Cross Will Talk On Flood Pact

Governor Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut will give his views of the Connecticut Valley Flood Control when he speaks here tomorrow at the 13th annual conference of the New England Council, it was learned today.

The pact is expected to be a controversial subject in the present session of Congress.

Of great interest to governors of New England states is whether the pact withholds from the federal Government its claimed rights over power development and favors private utilities as against public power.

Governor Hurley will be the principal speaker at the Massachusetts division dinner of the council tomorrow night. He is expected to discuss "The Need of Cooperation by the Business Community in State Affairs."

All six New England governors will speak over shortwave radio tomorrow on the objectives of the meeting, covering the economic problems of this section.

Frederic A. Delano of the national resources committee, Washington, will also speak tomorrow. Friday speakers are Wayne C. Taylor of the United States Treasury staff, Wendell P. Barker, former head of the New York mortgage committee; Dr. Leo Wolman, labor expert, and Ralph E. Flanders, economist.

Find Fun in Shaw Revamp of 'Cymbeline'

Critics Treat Version Of Shakespeare With Levity

LONDON, Nov. 17 (AP)—London critics today gave merry rather than serious consideration to George Bernard Shaw's rewritten version of William Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

The Evening News titled its review of last night's production of the play, "George Bernard Pshaw."

The review expressed opinion that the abdication passage in the last act, which Shaw rewrote, was "not in the best taste."

In an obvious allusion to former King Edward's abdication, the Irish playwright had one of the King's long lost sons, Cadwal, decline the throne, when he is hailed as the heir after he and his brother, Polydore, are found.

In answer to the shouts of his supporters, Cadwal says in blank verse:

"No, No! This kingly business has no charm for me—

"Compelled to worship priest-inventor gods,

"Not free to wed the woman of my choice,

"Being stopped at every turn by some fool

"Crying: 'You must not,' or still worse: You must.'

"O, no, sir. Give me back the dear old cave!

"I abdicate and pass the throne to Polydore."

Polydore retorts:

"Do you, by heavens? Thank you for nothing, my brother."

An editorial in The Star suggested Shakespeare had a better abdication piece in Richard II.

Of the new Cymbeline—which the theater program described as "Cymbeline, by William Shakespeare and George Bernard Shaw"—The Evening Standard simply said it preferred the original.

The Times complained that the actors neglected the Shakespearian parts to save their energy and art for the sections by Shaw.

The production was the fruit of Shaw's old threat that some day he would rewrite Shakespeare and "improve" him.

The Manchester Guardian did not criticize Shaw for touching up Cymbeline, but added:

"Shakespeare still has one advantage: He's immortal, while Mr. Shaw is only 81."

500 Answer Ads On Bay State's Industry Sites

Commission Discusses Plans to Bring in New Businesses

Approximately 500 inquiries from industries in other states have been received in the past month as a result of the Massachusetts State Development and Industrial Commission's nation-wide advertising campaign, it was announced today.

The advertisements, addressed to industrial and business leaders, points out Massachusetts' natural and economic advantages and urges them to "come to Massachusetts."

Inquiries have been received from as far away as California, Chairman Eugene M. McSweeney of the development commission said. He said the campaign is receiving "splendid co-operation" from railroads and trade groups throughout the country.

The development commission today discussed further plans for bringing new industries to the state and preserving those already here. At this discussion were representatives of the New Bedford group that Monday asked Governor Hurley to call a meeting of Massachusetts mayors to further a city-industry program.

Massachusetts is getting competition, Mayor Leo E. J. Carney of New Bedford told the development commission. Western and Southern states, notably, he said, are offering new industries tax-free locations.

Expert Points Out Peril Of More Than One Parole

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 17—The great mistake in the parole system is in allowing a criminal more than one parole, members of the New England Association of Chiefs of Police were told today.

Speaking was Dr. Carleton Simon, official criminologist for the association, which is in annual convention here.

Dr. Carleton also is official criminologist of the New York State Association of Chiefs of Police, and of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"Everyone agrees that a man who perhaps has made 'a mistake' is entitled, upon proper showing of willingness, to 'another chance'," Dr. Simon pointed out.

ONLY ONE PAROLE

"Where we make our mistake is in giving him not only another chance, but another, and another, and another.

"The entire subject can be revised by the simple expedient of having every State pass a law prohibiting further parole of felons who already have received one parole. In short, only one parole should be permitted a criminal during his life."

Dr. Simon said "a standing army of more than 4,300,000 thieves, murderers, gunmen and gangsters" menaces America. Of these, he declared, fully 20 per cent are criminals out on parole.

MUST BE CHECKED

Seventy-six per cent of the paroles granted are given to criminals serving sentences for major crimes, Dr. Simon said.

Analysis of one group of 13,519 paroles showed that in 30 per cent of the cases the parolees had received clemency "not only once or twice, but in some instances as many as ten times."

"We do not permit maniacs to run amok unchecked," Dr. Simon declared. "We must check our ever-increasing criminal trend."

Hunt Brothers In 2 Escapes

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 17—Police were scouring the city here today for Manuel and Oliver Raymond, Gloucester brothers, who escaped from Shirley Reformatory on consecutive days.

The Raymond brothers were sentenced four months ago in Shirley for breaking and entering and larceny, after a series of breaks were charged to them.

Shirley officials called City Marshal Frank S. Parsons yesterday, stating that Manuel Raymond had escaped on Monday. Today, Shirley officials notified Marshal Parsons that Oliver Raymond escaped last night.

William T. Nichols of Gloucester yesterday reported his car stolen, and Mrs. Allison Purington reported registration plates stolen from her car.

This morning the car was found, a total wreck, at Prospect and Marchant streets here, with the stolen plates on the car, according to police. In the car, police said, was a cap of the type worn by Shirley, bearing Manuel Raymond's name.

2 O'Connell Kidnapers Caught; 1 in Gun Duel

In low tones, then ordered King back into his car. Then they displayed a flash of their first cleverness. They ordered King to drive them downtown, and directly in front of city hall they snapped a command to stop the car, got out and, mingling with passersby, were lost to sight.

All around them were G-men, city police, state troopers but certainly none expecting to find their quarry in front of city hall.

And so, at dawn, the three furtive-eyed fugitives, afoot and almost broke, were still struggling to break through the cordon of heavily armed officers that encircles the city like a besieging army.

King told his story to police. At first they were inclined to be incredulous. He was questioned for several hours. So was Mrs. King. The fact that they differed as to time was pounced on and King went home not quite certain where he stood.

Then he noticed a strange overcoat in his flat. Back to headquarters he went with the coat. Police Chief George Peacock hastily summoned the five prison guards who yesterday were cowed by guns, bound with blanket strips and jammed into cells.

Guard John Corbett took a look.

"That's my coat," he said.

Said Peacock:

"King's story is true. Our men are in Syracuse."

Quickly orders went out canceling all leaves, equipped every man with tear bombs and machine guns. A checkup of all new arrivals—practically a house-to-house canvass—was begun.

In Morrisville, the search in which 5000 law officers are engaged cost its first life—Sergeant Joseph Fitzpatrick of the state police was killed when a police car slid off the road and crashed down an embankment while speeding to the source of a promising tip.

But other lives were involved—"shoot to kill" orders were carried by every officer in the hunt for the trio on whose heads Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' justice department has set a price of $2000 each.

N. H. Clues Fail In Kidnapers Hunt

Search for the three desperate O'Connell kidnapers in New England ended abruptly today at Nashua, N. H., when three occupants of a New York automobile which had been sought readily identified themselves as reputable citizens.

The car, which had been reported on the Lowell-Nashua road by a woman, who said she thought three men in it might be the kidnaper-convicts who broke out of Onandaga jail, Jamesville, N. Y., early yesterday, was found at a lunch cart in Main street, Nashua, early today.

But police found the three men were Joseph Tortorelli, 44, and Antonio Carpenter, 24, both of Milford, N. H., and Victor Poreara, 23, of First avenue, New York, visiting at Milford.

The three men had been in Boston on a trip and were returning to Milford when sighted by the woman who telephoned Nashua police.

Rayon Workers Laid Off

Foley Awaiting 'Ghost' Vote Data, He Says

Denies Shakeup in His Office, But Admits Several Will Go

District Attorney William J. Foley today declared he was still waiting from the police further evidence, requested a week ago, in connection with the recent vote fraud scandal.

At the same time the district attorney denied the report of a general cleanup in his office on January 1, but stated that "there are three or four of the 13 assistants who are on their way out."

Assistant District Attorney William G. Sullivan, who is preparing the vote fraud case for presentation before the grand jury, said the police as yet had failed to turn over to the district attorney's office transcripts of interviews with police officers and various exhibits of police listing cards bearing the signatures of alleged voting "ghosts."

Received from the police, Sullivan said, were the two volumes of testimony taken by a police stenographer at the three-day hearing in municipal court of James E. Murphy, telephone company inspector, who was held for the grand jury on a charge of aiding and abetting the illegal registration of a voter.

While Sullivan said he also awaited the police interview with Murphy in headquarters, police officials declared that Murphy made no statement to them.

With Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty absent at headquarters, other officials pointed out that it is not customary for the police to present evidence until called to testify before the grand jury.

In explanation of his contemplated changes on his staff, District Attorney Foley said:

"This is not because of any desire for political revenge, but rather because they have outlived their usefulness to my staff.

"These men were appointed for a six-month term which has since stretched into two years. I have five or six loyal workers who I intend giving a chance to help me run the Suffolk county district attorney's office.

"There will not be a drastic shakeup of any kind."

Judge to View Death Scene

Will See Spot at Night Where Boy Was Killed

So that he may see driving conditions as they are the same time of night, Judge John M. Perrins, in West Roxbury court today, reserved decision in a manslaughter case until he can ride over Neponset Valley parkway, Readville.

Charged with manslaughter before Judge Perrins, and also charged with dangerous driving, was William G. French of Roslindale avenue, Roslindale.

He is alleged to have been the driver of a car that killed 11-year-old Arthur Matton of Knight street, Readville, one night last week on the parkway road.

French testified that there were shadows on the road at the spot the boy was killed as he pushed a cartload of wood.

Lyons Gains One Vote in Recount; 13 Challenges

Cambridge Mayor Trailing by 267, Count Shows

John W. Lyons, challenged mayor-elect of Cambridge, picked up one more vote in the Cambridge recount today.

The additional vote was credited to Lyons in the Precinct 2 of Ward 1. His indicated plurality now is 267. The recount was demanded by Mayor John D. Lynch, defeated for re-election by 171 votes on the face of the returns.

Thirteen challenged ballots in Ward 1, Precinct 2, were added today to the 30 challenged in Precinct 1 Monday.

Final disposition of these challenged ballots, when the recount is completed, will be determined by court action.

The recount is being conducted in the Cambridge election commissioners' office, where five tables have been set up. At each table are two official counters and some ten or a dozen official observers. About 200 spectators watched the proceedings.

'Bossy' Runs Far Behind His Rival

Carens Sweeps up in Newburyport; Six Cities Hold Primaries

Mayoralty candidates in four Massachusetts communities and nominees for minor offices in two other cities had been chosen today by voters who flocked to their local polls.

Elections in preparation for general balloting Dec. 7 were held in Newburyport, Taunton, Brockton, Northampton, Quincy and Haverhill.

The following candidates for mayor were chosen:

Newburyport—James F. Carens, Jr., and Mayor Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis (non-partisan.)

Taunton—Mayor Arthur F. Poole and Charles J. Carey (non-partisan.)

Brockton—Charles D. McCaffrey (D.) and Fred D. Rowe (R.)

Northampton—Mayor Charles L. Dunn (D.) and William H. Feiker (R.)

Providing the greatest excitement in the six contests was the Newburyport primary, in which Carens, an attorney, led the headline-making Gillis by 2 to 1 when the final results were tabulated.

BOSSY IS UNDAUNTED

Carrying every ward in the city, including Bossy's favorite Ward 4, Carens received 3563 votes and Gillis 1725. Two other aspirants failed nomination.

The irrepressible Bossy, whose wife threatened to run against him and then withdrew on the eve of the balloting, was undaunted by the black outlook, declaring:

"This fight isn't over yet. Wait till election day."

And Mrs. Gillis added cheerily:

"If Bossy is beaten he'll have time to tend to his own knitting."

Gillis has run for the office six times and has been elected to four terms.

The non-partisan balloting in Taunton gave Mayor Poole 6718 votes for renomination. Dr. Carey was runner-up with 2520. Two other Taunton candidates also failed to receive nominations.

School committee candidates named were John F. Parker (incumbent), 5679; Stephen Rhodes, 4175; Mrs. Ruth O'Neill, 3964; Byron P. Taylor, 3875; Francis X. Reilly, 3240, and Joseph H. Powers, 3036.

Brockton voters gave Representative McCaffrey, former councillor and alderman, the Democratic nomination when he received 4782 tallies to defeat Mayor Lawrence E. Crowley, seeking another term. Crowley trailed his opponent by 391 votes.

The Republican mayoralty designation went to Rowe, who received a plurality of more than 2000 over President John J. Holmes of the Board of Aldermen.

Heavy ballotting smashed primary election records as 24,700 of the 33,840 registered voters went to the polls.

Nominating by caucus, Northampton Democrats chose Mayor Dunn as their standard bearer for another term. He received 1450 votes to the 913 given his opponent, former Water Commissioner Matthew J. Keevers.

Dunn will be faced by Dr. William H. Feiker, who was named by the Republican caucus Monday night.

LIGHT IN QUINCY

Quincy voters displayed little interest as only 36 per cent of the total registered went to the polls to choose school committee and councilmanic candidates.

Nominated for the school board were Roy Prout, 5514; L. Paul Marini, 4718; George W. Abele, 4381; and George C. McKeen, 2449. Two places are to be filled December 7.

One upset was registered however, when Frank N. Orcutt topped Councillor Roy A. Means as both were nominated for the council post from the sixth ward. Orcutt received 1094 votes and Means 730. Sixteen council candidates in all were named.

In Haverhill a record vote was rung up in an off-year election as 53 percent of the voters flocked to the polls, casting a total of 12,010 votes.

George F. Ramsey, who lost in the mayoralty election last year, led the field of 13 candidates for the Board of Aldermen, receiving 5808 tallies. Three incumbents, Thomas J. Conlon, James E. Costello and William J. O'Leary were renominated.

There was no contest in the school board elections, all four candidates automatically qualifying for the election. They were Bertha M. Stevens, 6758; Francis W. Cronan, 6385; Mrs. Dorothy G. Smith, 3440; and Edward W. Lucier, 2817.

There were only 14 men on the Medford police force when Captain Ewell, a native of Medford, first joined the department. The force now comprises 76 members.

Two officers, who were members at the time Captain Ewell was appointed, are still on active police duty. They are Special Officer James Kane and Lieutenant P. Frank Ward.

3 Maniacs Free After 5 Escape

NORWICH, Ct., Nov. 17—Three dangerously insane criminals were sought by law authorities today before they could do any damage after an escape from the state hospital here.

With two others, they overpowered two guards last night, slugging one and locking him in a room with the other after taking their keys.

Edward Pickus, 28, of Waterbury and Andrew Nichols, 54, of Stamford, were captured almost immediately by State Trooper Frederick Johnson. They were hiding near the hospital.

The three still at large are John B. Perry, 28, of New Haven, recently convicted of a sex crime; Joseph Kuzuk, 25, of Rockville and John J. Dwoyakowski, 40, of Norwich.

The only clue to the fugitives was given early today by A. M. Fuller of Poquetanuck. Fuller told police that a bedraggled man rushed into his home, called police and shouted into the telephone:

"This is Vice-President Garner!"

The man then fled from the house and disappeared, Fuller said.

Cockroaches carry germs of disease and filth from cellars and sewers to the pantry shelves and food containers. Liquids will kill only 10%. Poison powders will do about the same.

DON'T

Here are two Don'ts when you get cockroaches and water bugs.

(1) Don't get panicky and move out. It costs $15 or more to move out, while a can of Cheney's Killer costs 25c. Move the cockroaches out.

(2) Don't get used to cockroaches. It's no disgrace to get them, it happens to the best of families, but it is a disgrace to keep them. Treat them as Pests, not Pets.

There is only one sure and safe way to entirely rid the house of the pests. Roaches are night feeding bugs. They don't appear until late, and then the entire family turns out for its daily meal. Feed them something they like better than ordinary food, something that is non-poisonous and does not drive them back into the walls. Safe enough to spread on the pantry shelf. We guarantee.

Leaders Sought In Cantor Plot

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 17 (INS)—Working secretly, undercover agents for the district attorney today were trying to ferret out the ringleaders in a reported plot to assassinate prominent Jewish members of the film colony here.

Among those said to have been on the list of victims were Louis B. Mayer, wealthy producer, and Eddie Cantor, the comedian.

"As yet we have no evidence except reports of conversations upon which to base any arrests," Eugene Williams, chief investigator of the district attorney's office, explained.

"These conversations, in which the murder of prominent men was discussed, apparently were erous in their nature, and we believe that certain fanatics are given to serious consideration of such crimes."

Happy Home of Rivals Wrecked by Finances

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 (AP) — A household arrangement whereby a mother and her son lived happily for five years with her divorced husband and his second wife provided a strange chapter for the records of the circuit court today.

A disagreement over domestic finances wrecked the idyllic triangle in suburban Oak Park. A subsequent rift over custody of the youth led to the revelation of the unusual arrangement in a court hearing here.

The principals were Earl P. Cady, his first wife, Anna, their 12-year-old son, Willis, and Cady's second wife, Eileen. Cady was divorced in 1930 and he married Eileen in 1931. When he found himself unable to pay $7 weekly alimony to Anna he invited her and their son to share his home.

The arrangement was approved by the second Mrs. Cady, explained Attorney Irving Abrams, counsel for wife No. 1. The latter did the housework while Cady and his second spouse took jobs to meet household expenses. The mother and her son occupied separate quarters in the home.

Last January Mrs. Anna Cady left the home and went to live with her former husband's mother. Later she filed a petition to secure custody of her son, a move opposed by Cady and his second wife. The latter, explained Cady's attorney, had grown attached to the boy.

Judge Philip J. Finnegan termed the amicable relationship between the two women "remarkable" and said the youth would be well treated by both. He ruled, however, the boy should be with his mother and be free to see his father and the second Mrs. Cady at any time he wished.

Wildcat Is Slain In Bridgewater

EAST BRIDGEWATER, Nov. 17—A rifle bullet today had put a stop to the depredations of a 30-pound wildcat which had terrorized residents of this town for the past three weeks.

Peter Backford of Crescent street shot the beast, which was four feet long, after it had clawed his wife and their daughter, Charlotte, 22.

The animal pounced on its victims from the roof of the garage. Beckford, attracted by their screams as they fought the "bobcat" off, ran out and put a bullet through it.

Police Chief Everett Russell found it dead in the nearby woods shortly afterwards.

Instead of gangsters, however, they found six card players. Five of the players were released. "The man from New York" was held when, police said, he admitted to them he makes his living playing with "marked cards and loaded dice."

Sullivan to File Appeal in Loss Of Mayoralty

Worcester Incumbent, Bennett, Gallant Over Recount

WORCESTER, Nov. 17 — Mayor John S. Sullivan (D.) today prepared to file an appeal in the State Supreme Court after being counted out of the city's mayoralty by 96 votes.

The new mayor is William A. Bennett (R.), steel and wire company executive, who, prior to the recount, was declared defeated by 25 votes.

No bitterness attended announcement that Bennett was the recount victor. Both men heard the news while attending a firemen's banquet.

ALPHONSE AND GASTON

"The hard part," Bennett declared, "is winning from such a great lad as you are."

"If the Supreme Court finds you won," Sullivan gallantly replied, "you'll have my hearty and warm congratulations."

Results of the week-long recount were announced as follows:: Bennet, 35,864; Sullivan, 35,768.

Mayor Sullivan said he would base his appeal to the high court on 200 ballots which his counsel maintain were wrongly accredited to Bennett.

Mayor-elect Bennett said today that when he is sworn into office January 1 he will become the "mayor of all the people of Worcester." He promised to remove politics from the police department completely but said it was too early yet to make a definite statement on changes in municipal affairs.

SELF-MADE MAN

Bennett is a self-made man. He started at the bottom in 1916 with the Wickwire-Spencer Company, working his way step by step to the position of assistant superintendent.

His political career began in 1921 when he was elected to the Common Council. Later he was elected State Representative and alderman.

He met his wife, the former Nellie Baker, while they were students in Worcester South High School. They have two children, Gordon and Phyllis.

Giles Confirmed As Judge, Welsh As 'L' Trustee

Longmeadow Attorney To Become Successor To Justice Cox

The Governor's Council today approved the appointments of William C. Giles of Longmeadow, as Superior Court judge and Representative Patrick J. Welsh of Hyde Park as a Boston Elevated trustee.

Giles succeeds Judge Louis S. Cox, recently appointed to the Supreme Court bench. Welsh supplants George B. Johnson, resigned.

Welsh, Democratic floor leader of the House, was to take the oath of office today.

In appointing him, Governor Hurley expressed the hope he would continue in his capacity as a House member. To do this, Welsh will have to refuse the $5000 salary paid to Elevated trustees.

Welsh was to confer with House Speaker Horace T. Cahill to decide on procedure in this respect.

While the term to which he was appointed expires next June, it is expected he will be reappointed at that time.

Grasshopper May Send Man to Chair

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (INS)—A dead grasshopper, which may help send Simon Elmore to the electric chair for the sex murder of four-year-old Joan Kuleba, reposed as a grim bit of evidence on the counsel table today as trial of the 57-year-old WPA painter was resumed. The prosecution will charge that the grasshopper, imprisoned in a bottle, was used by Elmore to lure the child to the Staten Island shack in which she was assaulted and strangled.

By PEGGY DOYLE

Whether or not they do it with mirrors, the big blow that riddles a South Sea island in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Hurricane," is easily the year's most thrilling screen spectacle.

By contrast, it makes the Maugham-Colton play, "Rain," which had audiences literally drenched to the skin, seem in retrospect a gentle-dew-from-heaven affair.

Last night, at the Colonial, where it opened a limited two-a-day engagement, "The Hurricane" gave a large and distinguished audience the thrill of a lifetime. Some were even gasping, as they left the theater, that they were glad to be alive, so realistic was the torrential hurricane that lashed across the screen, unleashing countless tons of water and destroying an entire village.

•

It is magnificent make-believe and Hollywood, in the person of Special Effects Expert James Basevi, rates at least a cabman's nod from old Mother Nature in the way of professional courtesy.

* * *

Basevi, according to advance publicity, is the man who doped out this Ole Debbil hurricane which gets in your eyes, your hair, your ears and practically has you hanging on the Colonial's chandelier before it's exhausted itself—but not before it has completely exhausted you.

Only about 15 of the picture's 110 minutes is occupied with this monumental storm that scatters a population as if it were a box of matches, but outside of a trench or an electric chair they're the most stirring, breath-taking 15 minutes you're liable to spend for some time to come.

The authors of "The Hurricane" are Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, responsible for "Mutiny on the Bounty," another screen sea saga and one of the screen's most financially successful sea sagas. Oliver H. P. Garrett and Dudley Nichols did the adaptation.

Filmed on actual location in the South Pacific it boasts lushly beautiful backgrounds, an idyllic love story, an excellent cast and a fine musical score, in addition to the positively colossal hurricane.

* * *

It is the story of Terangi, played by the screen's newest and handsomest Tarzan, Jon Hall (a relative of the author), who runs up against the white man's baffling laws. First mate of a trading schooner, he goes ashore at Tahiti to buy a present for his bride, Marama (the eye-filling Dorothy Lamour, who'd like to know what's sarong about her costume?).

Terangi strikes a quarrelsome inebriated white man, who, unfortunately, has political influence and uses it against the native lad. Terangi is jailed for six months.

Dazed and miserable behind bars, Terangi attempts to escape prison again and again. Each time he is brought back, and another two or five years added to his sentence until he has 16 years to serve.

The captain of the schooner on which Terangi is first mate, sympathetically played by Jerome Cowan, intercedes for the unhappy youth.

So does the parish priest, a noble and tolerant man in C. Aubrey Smith's hands; the doctor, Mitchell, and the governor's wife, Mary Astor.

* * *

The entire native population of the island is virtually in mourning at their beloved Terangi's detention. Only Governor DeLaage, whom Raymond Massey plays with restraint and sincerity, holds out against Terangi. The law must be upheld, he says, implacably.

It is then that nature, in the guise of a man-eating hurricane, takes things into her own hands and effects a solution.

Hall and Lamour make a handsome Tarzan and mate, and so darned well-groomed. But it's to Raymond Massey that first acting honors go. He is splendid as the governor who refuses to let his heart affect his decisions. Thomas Mitchell's doctor is another fine piece of acting.

Loew Film Is Held Over

'The Awful Truth' Breaks Box Office Records

"The Awful Truth," Columbia's comedy-packed sensation co-starring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant will be held over for a second week at both Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Adapted to the screen by Vina Delmar, "The Awful Truth," has broken all attendance and box office records at both the State and Orpheum.

In the picture Miss Dunne is cast as the prim, staid wife of Cary Grant, a bounder of sorts who simply can't get used to marriage ties. He takes an innocent vacation in the guise of a business trip and returns to find his wife has been out all night with a romantic foreign vocal teacher.

The car, she explains, broke down and they were forced to spend the night at an inn. Accusations and recriminations fill the air before Mr. and Mrs. decide to separate. In court the only bone of contention proves to be Mr. Smith, the prolific wire-haired terrier, Asta, of "The Thin Man," series.

Affairs take their merry course until Cary expresses his intentions of marrying a pretty young thing with a social register background, as soon as the divorce is final. Irene then puts Theodora's wild forays to shame with her actions in the climactic scene, where she tries to impress Park Avenue that young Cary is not the sort to be marrying wealthy, pretty young things.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 17—Annabella will be seen as George Sand, the woman novelist who preceded Marlene Dietrich in wearing trousers, and who was the most ardent feminist of her day.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The wee garments Madame JOAN CRAWFORD TONE is knitting are for the dachshunds which will go east with her at Christmas time. OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND has declined BRIAN AHERNE'S offer to co-star in his stage play. GEORGE JESSEL being paged by GROVER WHALEN to serve on the committee for the New York World's Fair. CLARK GABLE only spending two days hunting and that's because CAROLE LOMBARD couldn't go with him. MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN writes she is bringing back a huge key formerly used to lock a wine cellar to use as a knocker.

All Hollywood turning out tonight for the preview of FRED ASTAIRE'S "Damsel in Distress".

Bridge and Whist To Aid Drum Corps

Mrs. John B. Kinity of Moultrie street, Dorchester, will conduct a bridge party in Ripley hall, Dorchester, Nov. 30 for the benefit of Jubilee Drum Corps, which is composed of Girl Scouts in that district.

The corps, which was one of the winners in the Boston Evening American contest in Columbia Stadium last June, won several first prizes during the past summer and fall. Mrs. Kinity will be assisted by Mrs. Joseph Gould and Mrs. James Tiefry.

Editors of 'Tech' Hit College Staff

Technology student editors of the college paper Tech have criticised the administration for failing to improve the standard of its instructing staff, although the graduate school of instruction is praised for having reached a new high level.

The editors are particularly opposed to having men on the staff who are selected for their ability to conduct research, but do not like to teach some elementary subjects.

Mr.J.J.Cremmen,
Advertising Director,
Boston American-Sunday Advertiser,

Dear Mr.Cremmen:

If you will check your records, I believe you will find,that the thirty-two columns of advertising used by Kane's in the November 4th. Boston American, was the largest amount of Furniture advertising you have ever carried in any issue of the American.

This substantial advertising investment indicates our confidence in the buying power of New England, and Boston American readers in particular. We have learned, by long years of experience, to expect consistent results from your newspapers.

For our part, we prepared for this sale by assembling outstanding furniture values that are doubly impressive in the face of advanced wholesale costs.

We felt that the best way to express our appreciation for the patronage that has made our success possible was to "Say It With Values."

It is our belief that "business goes where and when it is invited", and we prove this by our advertising and buying policy for fifteen Kane stores.

Very truly yours,
Harry Kane

Louis E. Kirstein To Be Honored By Harvard

Friends Give $28,550 For Fellowship in Medical School

Harvard University today announced acceptance of a $28,550 gift from 89 of the philanthropist's friends for the creation of the "Louis E. Kirstein Fellowship" in the Medical School.

United States Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis was one of the 89 donors listed in the announcement of the gift, which Henry L. Shattuck, treasurer of Harvard University, formally accepted.

HELPFUL IN RESEARCH

Mr. Shattuck, in a letter to Judge Abraham K. Cohen, who headed the committee of friends, declared:

"I need hardly say that these gifts will be most gratefully accepted in accordance with the terms stated in your letter. The income of the fund will not only be most helpful in carrying on research at the medical school, but also it is a fine tribute to Mr. Kirstein as a man and a citizen."

Vets to Sponsor Camps in Drive Against Nazis

Phelan Heads Group to Wage War on Foreign Influences

Plans for organizing 50,000 war veterans and soldiers in Massachusetts in an educational drive for American against Nazi principles was announced today by Major Francis X. Phelan of the 101st Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard.

The new organization would be known as the United American Veterans, according to Major Phelan, a nephew of the late James J. Phelan, Boston banker.

Members of the United American Veterans would be drawn from the ranks of Massachusetts men who have served or are serving in the armed forces of the nation.

"Some time ago," Major Phelan told the Boston Evening American, "reference was made in the press that camps for children were operated here in Massachusetts by the Nazi government.

"The American flag was reported in evidence at the camps, but it was merely a screen, as the Nazi flag was also there.

"The real purpose of the camps for the children, maintained by the Nazis, was to instill into the minds of our youths the claimed importance and benefits of Nazi-ism.

"They were teaching ideas very foreign to our own, and our flag is just another flag to them.

"What is the answer? The answer is The United American Veterans. We are to sponsor and support camps throughout the Commonwealth for our youths, camps where liberty, justice and tolerance for all creeds, races and colors will be taught."

Pay as Low as $2.50 a Week, Watt Tells Labor Probers

A charge that two Fitchburg shoe companies are paying wages as low as $2.50 a week was made today by Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of Massachusetts Federation of Labor, at a hearing before the special commission studying labor legislation.

Watt also charged that one of the Fitchburg companies is [illegible] by taking [illegible] for social security taxes instead of [illegible]

Rev. Russell D. Sawyer [illegible] sentative from Ware, a member of the commission, [illegible] the commission should summon officials and books of the two Fitchburg companies and go into this matter."

Watt made the "sweatshop" charges while opposing changes in the Baby Wagner act passed by the last Legislature, especially the so-called Herter amendment which provides for incorporation of labor organizations.

Watt said that his organization would present several amendments to the Baby Wagner act at the next session of the Legislature but declined to present them to the commission at this time.

He added that the American Federation of Labor [illegible] standards of hours and wages [illegible] that the Massachusetts [illegible] agrees with this [illegible]

Jewish Charity Drive Reaches $501,655

4 Days Left to Hit Goal of $565,000; Seek Small Sums

The Associated Jewish Philanthropies drive today stood at $501,655 with four more days to reach its $565,000 goal.

In the remaining days of the campaign every unsolicited prospect is to be visited according to [illegible], general chairman of the fund.

Importance of small contributions was [illegible] by Dr. B. M. Selekman, executive director of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, at the weekly [illegible] luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce.

"The amount of $10 is tremendously important to the Associated," he said.

"Cover the $10 and $5 subscribers. Ten dollars will take care of two children who are having care in foster homes for two weeks. Ten dollars will pay rent for a whole family for ten days. Ten dollars will provide food for a family of five for a whole week.

"If you go out now and cover the small subscribers we will have occasion for a jubilee dinner this Sunday evening and make it possible for us to protect from human suffering thousands of people during the coming 12 months."

'Self' Mother-Love Hit By Smith College Head

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Dr. William Allan Neilson, president of Smith College, was only mildly interested today to learn that he had caused a flutter of indignation in maternal hearts by declaring that mother love is not the beautiful emotion the poets say it is.

"I used to think mother-love was one of the most wonderful things in the world," Dr. Neilson said in a speech last night, "but now I don't believe in mother love. Nine times out of ten mother-love is nothing but self-love."

"Mother love," the pedagogue went on, "is largely a matter of saving mother's face. Mothers don't want their daughters to fail in school because it reflects on the mother and is socially awkward."

After mulling it over this morning, Dr. Neilson explained with one hand on the knob of his hotel room door that he was thinking only of a limited number of mothers and that his remarks were not to be applied to mother love as a whole.

"I suppose I did say that," he said, "although it seems a little exaggerated. I was simply trying to make the point that some parents do not progress."

In his speech, made at a dinner given him by the Smith College Club of New York in honor of his 20th anniversary as president, Dr. Neilson said:

"Often the first thing that a mother does when her daughter enrolls in college is to ask us just how much time the girl can get away from school, away from all the opportunities we can give her. About that I despair.

"I want the mothers in this audience to examine their consciences in dealing with their daughters, and find if they are really interested in the daughter's welfare and her intellectual development, or in her social career, and in what the neighbors will think of her."

Too Many, Say Police, Lads in Lineup

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Too many pennies—close to 6600 of them—brought five teen-aged youths into the lineup at police headquarters today on charges of grand larceny.

Detectives saw the youths lugging a heavy tin box along the street, followed them to an apartment and found the youngsters dividing a mound of coppers.

Meanwhile Aaron Golding was complaining to police that a tin box containing $66 in pennies from [illegible] vending machines had been stolen from his car.

The box weighed about 51 pounds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—Edward A. O'Neal, [illegible] American Farm Bureau Federation, [illegible] Homer Martin, [illegible] United Automobile Workers, [illegible]

"American farmers are shocked at newspaper reports of your urge upon all members of CIO automobile unions to withhold consumption of meat in an effort to reduce prices.

"Is this an invitation for American farmers to take similar action against products produced by CIO union labor? Factory wages are more than 30 per cent in excess of 1929 level and retail food prices, including meat, are nearly 20 per cent less than during same period.

"National welfare demands a balance as between agriculture, labor and industry, and American farmers will resist, by whatever means necessary, any efforts to aggravate the present disparities."

Files New Brief Against Black

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—Robert Gray Taylor of Media, Pa., appeared before the Supreme Court today for the second time seeking to file a brief questioning the right of Justice Hugo L. Black to sit on the bench.

The court last Monday denied his petition for permission to file a brief expressing his views.

In his new motion Taylor, who describes himself as chairman of the Philadelphia Court Plan Committee, said the court should decide whether Black perjured himself in taking a judicial oath "in certain material respects diametrically opposed to his prior irrevocable oath to the Ku Klux Klan."

Phone Booth Electric Shaver Needs It

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Charles Warren, 25, an unemployed salesman, had a beard and an electric razor when he set out to look for a job today, but no electricity.

So he dropped into a stationery shop on Second avenue and shut himself in the telephone booth. A few minutes later the proprietor, Jacob Ezaak, noticed that the light in the booth was out. When he investigated, he said, he found that Warren had plugged his razor into the light socket and was calmly shaving himself.

Ezaak called the police and Warren, only half shaved, was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge.

THE WILKEN FAMILY
BLENDED WHISKEY—IT'S OUR FAMILY'S WHISKEY, NEIGHBOR!

The grandest idea Pa Wilken ever had!
I can still see Pa Wilken sitting on the edge of his chair there—excited as anything. Boys he says, I got a idea! What'd we was to put up our own Family's Whiskey Recipe in regular bottles—and let everybody enjoy the exact same whiskey as us distillers!
That was the start of the whole thing. I recollect it plain as can be—him bouncing up from his chair, talking so fast, and our dog Jessie barking like she thought we'd gone crazy. But we hadn't all right—as shown by how fast you all are buying Our Family's Whiskey!
Harry E. Wilken

There's a heap of happy folks enjoying the selfsame whiskey as us distillers nowadays!

It used to be that only just a few of our nearby neighbors along the Valley Road ever got to taste this personal recipe of our Family. But they always smacked their lips so over the tastiness of it, finally Pa Wilken hit onto the idea of putting it up for everybody to enjoy. And nowadays it seems you can't hardly make mention of whiskey, but what folks will ask have you tried The Wilken Family Whiskey. Well I'm wondering have you tried it? It's our own personal recipe gotten up by our Family after having made I don't know how many million barrels of whiskey. And we think for out and out tastiness nothing can touch it! Well, anyways, I'd sure like you to try it and see for yourself!

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

We rather tend to forget that we have an Academy of the Arts and Letters in America until we hear of some one's death or election.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

This must not be confused with the Academy of Arts and Sciences, the headquarters of which is on Newbury street, Boston. Nor must it be confused with the Institute of Arts and Letters, a much larger body, which serves as a kind of fishpond from which a few lucky immortals are chosen.

In its origin and methods of election our Academy is quite as democratic as the more famous one in Paris, founded by Cardinal Richelieu. Indeed, I suspect it is more democratic, because no man among us need offer himself formally as a candidate, pay calls, and, if elected, utter a panegyric on his dead predecessor. Nevertheless, if we have an aristocracy of men of letters and artists I suppose the Academy is that aristocracy.

Academicians die in the course of nature and their places have to be filled. The meeting in New York recently remembered the names and achievements of the men (and women) who have passed on.

Elihu Root Is Honored By Columbia President

It was a long list, because most of those elected are persons who have already enjoyed long careers and are ripe for death. Paul Elmer More, the humanist, Lorado Taft, the sculptor, Elihu Root, William J. Henderson, a newspaper music critic of eminence, Blashfield, the mural painter, Macmonnies, the sculptor, William Gillette, Childe Hassam, painter, and Mrs. Edith Wharton were among those who were remembered and memorialized.

Owen Wister spoke about the first president, William Dean Howells, the one hundredth anniversary of whose birth is being celebrated this year. President Butler, of Columbia, spoke on perhaps the most distinguished of the Academy's recent dead, Elihu Root.

It is always interesting to see of what calibre are the men or women who are going to fill the shoes of the celebrated dead. It is an interesting list in view of careers and attainments, although some of them have a wider popularity than others.

Van Wyck Brooks Wins Fame as U. S. Writer

They are Charles McLean Andrews, Yale historian, probably not very well known except in the circles of his interests; Bernard Berenson, newspaper and magazine and book writer on arts and things artistic, who now lives in Italy; William Adams Delano, architect of New York. These three are perhaps the least known by the public at large.

Better known in Boston is Frederick Shepherd Converse, the composer, and Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, whose early professional work was also done in Boston.

Van Wyck Brooks, Harvard '08, has come up in the world since I knew him as an undergraduate. Not merely his two psycoanalytic volumes, "The Ordeal of Mark Twain" and "The Pilgrimage of Henry James," have made him well known, but the recent success of his literary history, "The Flowering of New England" (Pulitzer Prize) has given him real literary fame. Everybody knows Albert Spalding the violinist.

Charles Warren's Books Very Timely at Present

New York knows Jonas Lie (pronounced Lee) the painter better than Boston. But now that pre-eminence in English studies has passed from Harvard to Yale, Chauncey Brewster Tinker is perhaps the leader among professors of English literature in this country. He writes well, too, something which cannot always be said for English professors.

The last figure, who is known here in Boston because a Boston firm publishes his works (Little, Brown & Co.), is the indefatigable Washington lawyer, Charles Warren, whose several books on the Supreme Court are very timely at present. If the American Academy has any political predilections, perhaps the election of this scholar sufficiently displays them.

Some people jeer at the American Academy because it does not recognize the bright young radicals, the literary and artistic anarchists, and the cacophonous musicians.

I doubt if there is a single sur-realist on the list. But after all, it is a stabilizing influence. William Dean Howells, its first president, may not have been a genius, but the thing he stood for is something that American literature and art cannot well do without. We might call it, with Kipling, "law, order, duty and restraint, obedience, discipline."

'Jobs for Many' Belief Tangles Mail Census

Saturday Deadline Set for Filing Of Cards

The huge task of delivering census blanks to the unemployed in the Boston postal district is complicated by a belief on the part of registrants that they will be put to work at once, Assistant Superintendent of Mails John W. Grady announced today.

To counteract this prevailing opinion Grady asserted:

"The fact is that the cards will first be checked at local stations, then sent to the Boston central office, where they will be sorted by counties and forwarded to John D. Biggers, national administrator of the census, in Washington."

Meanwhile while the army of 1900 mail men in the Boston district continued to deliver the blanks at every address on their respective routes Grady estimated that approximately 700,000 cards will have been distributed in the local area by tonight.

In the state, he said, the number delivered should verge on the two million mark.

Emphasizing the importance of persons unemployed or working on part time jobs to sign the cards Grady recalled the message from President Roosevelt at the opening of the national census taking campaign.

"If you give me the facts I shall try to use them for the benefit of all who need and want work and not now have it."

With Saturday the deadline for filing the cards it was expected the canvass of returns will be made at the Boston postoffice next Wednesday.

At the office of the Veterans Bureau in the federal building it was stated that veterans seeking information relative to filling out the cards will be accommodated.

Colonel William J. Blake, manager of the Boston office of the Veterans Administration exhorted all post commanders of veterans organizations and their auxiliaries to co-operate in the census.

Utilities Office Back on 'Hill'

The executive council today adopted an order providing for the transfer of the State Department of Public Utilities from the Public Works Building at 100 Nashua street, North End, to the State House for convenience of the public.

The department will be housed in the quarters now occupied by the State Department of Mental Diseases on the first floor.

The State Department of Mental Diseases will move to the quarters now occupied by the Public Utilities Department.

For many years the Public Utilities Department was located at the State House before moving to Nashua street.

Cox Sails Ketch From Boston

Charles P. Cox, young English writer, piloted his new 37-foot ketch Naomi away from Commercial wharf today on the outgoing tide on the second leg of a proposed three-year trip around the world.

Here for four days at T wharf after crossing from Shelburne, N. S., where the Naomi was built, Cox completed fitting of his yacht. He shifted to Commercial wharf and stored supplies of food, ice and 175 gallons of water.

Then off he went, accompanied by two young sailors as crew. Cape Cod canal, down the coast to Florida, to the Bahamas, Panama canal, Pacific coast and the South Seas reads his colorful itinerary. Dynasties may rise and fall, wars rage, but for three years he'll travel in peace, with storms his sole care.

Blames Bond Probe On 'Big Business'

Charles K. Bush, organizer of the $4,000,000 bond issue to finance Durant, Inc., announced today that he blamed "big business" for a move to investigate his fund drive.

Under summons served at the behest of the State Department of Public Utilities, Bush is due to appear at the State House tomorrow to give his story of the quest for funds.

Brighton Factory Fire Rekindles

Debris of the Thompson Norris Paper Box Company on Braintree street in Brighton broke into flames anew early today, bringing firemen to the scene for the third time in a few weeks.

The first time damage was estimated at thousands of dollars, and since then two other fires have broken out in the embers.

Six Angles on Uncle Sam's Census

"Maybe There's Hope"——

"Let's See, Now——"

"It's a Good Idea——"

"All Right, IF——"

"I'll Fill It Out, Anyhow——"

"Hmmm—A Lot of Questions——"

A remarkable study of expressions appears in this series of photographs taken at the Volunteers of America headquarters in Hanover street. Six men, shown United States unemployment report card, pore over the questions. Some immediately start to fill in the answers. Others hesitate, wonder just what may come of the whole business. Hope, skepticism and many another emotion play on the faces of these men. Similar scenes were enacted all over the land today, with nation-wide distribution of the cards under way.

Body of Beach Victim Sent Here

Believed a suicide, the body of Mrs. Ellen N. Shackleford, 41, Philadelphia socialite found dead on the beach at Oak Bluffs three days ago was sent here today for cremation at Forest Hills cemetery.

District Attorney William C. Crossley at Vineyard Haven said that examination of the dead woman's organs had "failed to disclose evidence of foul play."

Mrs. Shackleford's remains were identified by her brother, John R. Nicholson, of Washington. At the same time, her husband, Randolph B. Shackleford, who sped to the Cape town from Philadelphia, identified a wedding ring worn by the dead woman.

It is believed the woman leaped into the sea from a Boston bound steamer November 1. A suicide note purporting to have been written by her was found in a stateroom on the ship.

Gets Year in Theft Of Policeman's Car

Convicted of stealing a Quincy police officer's car, Leo Jaster, 29, of Phipps street, Quincy, was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction today by Judge Kenneth Nash in Quincy Court.

Jaster was arrested four days ago in Batavia, N. Y., on a speeding charge in a car later found to belong to Quincy Police Officer George Wilson.

Snow Flurries To Dodge Boston

Boston's weather bureau today halted jubilation of youngsters who had begun to dust off sleds and skis on the basis of a hint of possible snow. The bureau stated that the only snow within flying distance was in the Alleghenies, and that the storm was not likely to head this way.

Temperature was 42 degrees at 9 a. m., and was due to hover around that mark or a bit lower over the next 24 hours, the report said.

Youth Describes Reformatory as Crime School

'Teacher's' Advice Led Him Into North End Shooting, He Says

How going to jail is like going to a school or clearing house for crime was graphically described at the Boston police lineup today by Robert J. Doherty, 23, who was captured yesterday after shooting it out with two policemen in North End.

Eleven shots were fired in the [illegible] battle, during which children ran screaming for safety. No one was wounded, however. Doherty was captured. A companion escaped.

He knew his companion, Doherty said at the lineup, only as "Herran."

Doherty admitted he himself only 12 days ago received a suspended sentence for automobile theft. Meanwhile he had been in Concord Reformatory.

SENT TO "JERRY"

There, he said, he met one of the "teachers" of the crime school, a man who told him to look up a fellow named Jerry in Charlestown when he got out.

He saw Jerry yesterday, he related, and Jerry, he said, supplied him with a revolver, the same revolver he emptied later at the two policemen.

"I agreed to pay him $7 for it," Doherty stated.

Police attending the lineup [illegible] Doherty didn't say [illegible] they understood where the $7 he agreed to pay was coming from.

"I left Jerry's place," Doherty continued, "and was walking across Sullivan square when Herran came along in a car and tooted the horn at me.

"I got in with him, and he told me the car was 'hot' (stolen) and he had to get some different license plates. So we went over to a place where some cars were parked, and took the plates off of one of them.

"Then we discussed what we were going to do, and 'Herran' said his idea was to stick up a lot of number game' operators—he said we could make a lot of money that way.

"We started back to see 'Jerry' again, to see if he could get us a list of places, but just then the police cruiser pulled up alongside.

WANTED TO GET AWAY

"Herran got out and ran one way, and I ran the other. Then I heard the officer (Patrolman John J. O'Connor) shooting at me. I didn't know he was firing into the air. I turned around and shot back at him.

"Then the other officer (Policeman Michael J. Rizzo) came running, and we shot at each other, too, but I didn't really aim to hit either of them. All I wanted was to get away."

"And how did you get all battered up the way you are?" one of the officers attending the lineup, surveying Doherty's black eyes, puffed lips and blood drenched, tattered shirt, asked him.

"My feet got tangled in my overcoat when I turned to run, and I fell down," Doherty replied.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By

Constance G. Naylor

Guest writer of the Girl About Town column today is Mrs. George M. Naylor, Jr., assistant director of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy and a member of the American Occupational Therapy Association and Massachusetts Association for Occupational Therapy.

Each year the census taker knocks at my door, and asks my occupation. Each year my answer is "I'm an Occupational Therapist," whereupon I am asked to spell it. Then comes the exclamation "I've heard of a lot of different occupations, but it's the first time I've heard of one of those things. What is it?" And then for ten minutes, or as much longer as I can keep him, he listens.

MRS. NAYLOR

I am glad to take every opportunity of talking about my chosen profession, for I feel that many people have heard vaguely about O. T. and are anxious to know more.

Occupational Therapy, familiarly called "O. T." is any activity prescribed by a physician for its curative value. It may be any activity from metalcraft to gardening, from taking part in a play to taking a correspondence course in advertising. The type of activity which the physician prescribes depends upon the nature of the illness.

Designing a Cure To Fit the Malady

In the case of diseases or injuries to the bones, joints and muscles, for instance, the physician might feel that it would be beneficial to treat the patient by giving the affected legs or arms some carefully regulated exercise. He sends a prescription to his occupational therapist stating that he wants "strengthening of the gastrocnemius." She knows that this means that a certain kind of exercise of the ankle is the thing desired. She devises some activity which will give the patient just the required amount of exercise and at the same time keep him interested, and his thoughts away from any possible pain involved.

For example, a jig-saw might be used which operates much like a bicycle. The patient would have the fun of cutting out some object and at the same time get the necessary muscle motion. There are numerous types of activities with which the occupational therapist is equipped to treat the ankle, such as woodworking, dressmaking, gardening, pottery making, etc. One could go on listing them indefinitely.

In the tuberculosis sanatoriums, where the patients usually stay for several months, the major part of the O. T. program consists of pursuing studies. It affords the patient the opportunity, while hospitalized, to further his education through attendance in the classroom or through correspondence courses. In many cases the patient learns the rudiments of some occupation he can follow as soon as he is well.

Cured After 5 Years He Turns to Gardening

For example, one young man who was forced to spend about five years in a sanatorium was guided through proper reading and studies, to learn considerable about landscape gardening, so that today he is successfully earning his living in that profession.

Considerable training is required to become an occupational therapist. Any person wishing to become a Registered Occupational Therapist must be a graduate of an accredited occupational therapy school and in addition must have satisfactorily completed one year of employment in the field.

Did you know that Boston has the distinction of having one of the first training schools for occupational therapists in this country? Did you know that it has an international reputation, and that many of it's graduates hold positions of prominence in the profession?

The Boston School of Occupational Therapy, of which I speak, is the only training school in New England which is recognized by the American Occupational Therapy Association.

Students Given Rigid Training in Hospitals

A cordial invitation is extended to you to visit it at any time. It is located at 7 Harcourt street, just a step from Copley square.

The course is set up to meet the new requirements of the American Medical Association.

The demand for occupational therapists far exceeds the supply. It is one of the few fields of endeavour for women which is not overcrowded. Provided one is properly trained, she is always sure of a position. For the right type of young woman it offers a wide field of service and an interesting life work. And when I say work, I speak advisedly, for, although I am no doubt prejudiced, I know of no more strenuous nor whirlingly exciting job in the world than that of an Occupational Therapist.

What Has Happened

On the [illegible] "Gat" Brower learns that he is about to be paroled from Alcatraz, "The American Devil's Island," Red Carroll, his arch enemy, is stabbed in the prison workshop with a knife [illegible] to Brower.

CHAPTER 16

Flo Allen and Ann Brower paced back and forth upon the platform at San Francisco Airport, impatiently awaiting the arrival of the transcontinental plane from New York.

Finally it arrived, and among the four passengers to alight was George Drake, handsome young district attorney.

Ann rushed to him and threw herself into his arms.

"I came as soon as I got your wire, darling," he whispered into her ear. "I'm here to help you and I'll do everything I can."

Flo Allen stepped up and [illegible] young Drake and the [illegible] a taxi [illegible] town. As the cab [illegible] Drake [illegible] hand.

"I got a leave of absence to come out here to take your father's case. Is Gat—I mean your dad, still out on 'The Rock'?"

"No," replied Ann. "They've brought him into San Francisco, to the county jail, to try him for—for—murder."

HELD FOR MURDER

"Tell me everything you know about the killing of Carroll," the young prosecutor interrupted.

[illegible]

"All we know, dear, is what dad told us. You see——"

[illegible]

"Gat told us everything he knew. It was like this. He didn't know it had happened until it was all over. It happened in the shoeshop and Carroll was sitting next to Gat at the same work table. Next to Carroll was an old fellow they call 'The Flying Dutchman'——"

And [illegible] Brower's [illegible] related [illegible] No. 1 who [illegible] faced [illegible] life for the [illegible] Red [illegible].

• • •

"Gat" Brower was not the only prisoner transferred from "The Rock" [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] to the county jail in Frisco.

Four others — "Harp" Santell, "The Flying Dutchman," Tough Tony [illegible] and [illegible] known as [illegible] of whom worked at the same bench with Brower and Carroll, had been brought in as material witnesses.

A CROSS-EXAMINATION

"Harp" and "The Flying Dutchman" were together in a cell. It was night and they sat on the edges of their bunks and talked—this being able to hold conversation being a luxury to the men from Alcatraz who for the whole period of their incarceration had been forced to almost silence—almost muteness by the rigid rules of Uncle Sam's toughest prison.

But the conversation did not seem to be just conversation—it sounded more or less like a mild but persistent questioning. Santell's persistent querying. "The Flying Dutchman" phlegmatically noncommittal.

"What I don't unnerstand, Dutch, is how 'Gat' could a knocked off 'Red' wit'out you seein' it happen," "Harp" repeated for the tenth time.

"Did YOU see it happen?" the [illegible] countered.

"I tell ya, I was watchin' for th' Clipper, same as everyone else."

"But you don't think that Gat did kill him, huh, Harp?"

"Naw," replied Santell. "I think Gat's too smart a gee to make a sucker play like that."

OLD PARTNERS

"So mebbe you think I know somethin' I don't tell, huh?"

"Well, you were with Red Carroll an' his brother, Butch, on that postoffice job in Wichita, Dutch. They croaked the night watchman an' got away wit' the dough and left you to take the rap. I know, cause Butch Carroll tol' me all about it when we was together in Dannemorra."

"But it was Gat's shiv (knife) they found stuck in him, Harp."

"Yeah, Dutch, but supposen it had been your shiv . . . what could they do to you?"

The Flying Dutchman hesitated [illegible] before [illegible]. His [illegible] hand stroked the wrinkled, weathered throat as he spoke.

"They could mebbe hang me, Harp."

Santell laughed.

"An old duck like you doin' life! No jury in th' world 'd ever knock off an old bozo like you. Red had it comin' to him, an' he got it. Why Dutch, you'd finish your life bit on 'The Rock' with every con in the place lookin' up to you like a hero."

But Dutch couldn't see it that way.

"I don't vant to be no hero, Harp. I chust wanna finish out my days in peace."

Harp Santell leaned closer significantly.

"Yeah, Dutch. But CAN you?"

NOT AFRAID

Once more the aged convict paused before replying. He glanced quickly at Santell, then said:

"I tink so. Yah, I tink so."

"Y' mean t' tell me, Dutch, that if you'd done this job—mind you, I'm saying IF you and not Gat done this job, you could sleep easy an' let another guy take the rap for you?" Santell shuddered visibly.

"If it was me I'd never be able t' sleep again. Gat's ghost would haunt me an' I'd prob'ly go stir bugs—nuts."

"The Flying Dutchman" chuckled:

"I ain't afraid of no ghosts, Harp. And I'm doin' life at Alcatraz an' no ghost can get into 'The Rock' any more than I could get out. G' night."

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Truly Precious Fragrance

SHIRLEY ROSS vows there's an exhilaration in knowing that as every inch of your flesh breathes, it exudes an ethereally soft fragrance . . . which is the basis of the brand new perfuming technique that's turning yesterday's breezy outdoor gals into veritable enchantresses!

It's the Spell-Weaver of New 'Light' Perfumes for Body

By ARLINE GOULD

CHAMPAGNE TASTES don't require a squandering of all your capital if you know how and what to buy these days . . . and you're buying champagne for beer money in more than one way when you use a new French "bouquet" for a body perfume, because it's made with precious wine alcohol!

It's lessons in charm you need if you haven't found out about the continental perfume methods that are sweeping the country.

• • •

The whole point is to employ lavishly a fragrance that is less formal and intense than perfume but more fragrant than cologne.

No matter how generously you shower such a fragrance over yourself it has a bewitched quality, for it seems to sink into the skin and with gentle, warm breathing of the pores come deliciously faint whiffs!

• • •

Because of our country's laws for manufacturers, often the native product will use crass denatured alcohol. But not far from Grasse where the flower oils used in this "bouquet" are blended, the merging of the fragrance with a wine alcohol is effected. And the result is a rather special aura that you simply don't find in anything else. It actually benefits the texture of your skin as well!

• • •

It comes over in quantities and is bottled here, consequently the "bouquet," in spite of all its expensive oils, is to be had in a good-looking flask for around a dollar. You'll like the lilac iridescence of the glass.

After the bath is the best time to use it. It's not a great extravagance though you get a luxurious effect . . . if you atomize it all over your rooms.

• • •

A dash in bath water or shampoo is fun. And you can always have the exhilaration of fresh fragrance around you by spraying closets, chests and handbags with it. There's no "over-doing" it with such delicate scents, which is apt to happen with heavy perfumes.

• • •

Straight from the flower fields of Grasse come six odors . . . some blended, some catching the breath of a single flower. They're "Bokhara," "L'Opera," "Devotion," which is a singularly real lilac; "Gardenia," which is true and lush; "Don D'Amour," and "Sweet Pea."

It's a Christmas inspiration for list-bedevilled people, because any age at all will adore one of the flasks.

• • •

For all information on the French "bouquet" made of costly flower oils from Grasse and skin beautifying wine alcohol, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, week days until 5, or write her at the Boston American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I am announcing my engagement next month.

A. "To my Mother" Christmas card would be too premature. I should definitely think. Your fiance's mother might well question your taste if you sent her such a card before your marriage. Better to send her a Christmas note or the usual Christmas card.

How to Choose Thanksgiving Turkey

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

THE SEASON of "The Glorified Bird" is at hand.

Everyone is talking turkey, pumpkin pie, cranberry jelly and all the other pet dishes for that first of a series of holiday occasions, the Thanksgiving dinner.

Some are planning elaborate meals and others are trying to keep the meal simple in order to have more time for enjoying guests. Regardless of your personal plans, Turkey Is King. Fact and every cook has his or her pet theory on how the bird should be cooked.

Yes, we have our favorite method along with our own idea of stuffing. But we are trying to pass along a number of suggestions from day to day in order that you may make your own decision as to how to cook the turkey.

Here are a few points that will help you select just the right bird for your family group.

How To Tell a Young Tender Bird

1—Get branded turkey. This packer's designation of quality is as reliable as for other fresh and smoked meats. It indicates milk fed carefully dressed and chilled poultry.

2. Look at the feet and legs if left on the bird. Young birds have smooth shiny feet and are not dry and scaly.

3. The skin of the bird will be smooth and pliable with the pinkish flow of flesh through the skin.

4—And above all—test the breast bone. If it's pliable rather than [illegible] and stiff the bird is young.

What size turkey to buy:

For a family of 8 to 10, a 15 to 18 lb. bird.

For a family of 6—an 8 to 12 lb. bird.

For a family of 4 or less—a half turkey.

Plan to make your turkey selection at least a week ahead with instructions to deliver the 24th.

May we offer this suggestion for a Thanksgiving dinner menu—one that is ample yet simple to prepare?

THANKSGIVING MENU

Clear Consomme Served with Popcorn
Roast Turkey Sausage Stuffing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Sweet Potatoes
Baked Onions
Apple, Celery and Grape Salad
Individual Mince Pies Coffee

ROAST TURKEY—SAUSAGE STUFFING

- 12 to 14 lb. Turkey
- 3 quarts ½-inch bread cubes—toasted
- 2 tablespoons salt
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ½ cup chopped onion
- Poultry seasoning to taste
- 1 lb. pure pork sausage, links or bulk
- Hot water to moisten

Ask your dealer to draw the bird, remove the feet, leg tendons and cut off the neck, leaving the neck skin intact. Save the liver, gizzard and heart for gravy.

Singe the turkey, remove any remaining pin feathers with tweezers, remove the oil sacs and scrub the bird thoroughly inside and out with warm water in which a little baking soda is mixed. Dry with soft cloth.

Salt the fowl inside and out, stuff both body and neck cavity with dressing and truss. With cord and needle, close the body cavity and tie the legs to the tail piece, close to the body. Pull the neck skin to the back of the body and skewer in place. Turn tips of wings back under body. Place the bird on the rack of the roaster and cover the breast with layers of turkey fat, or melt some fat, dip a soft cloth into it and spread the cloth over the breast meat.

Place similar wrappings on leg bones. Place in a 300 deg. F. oven and roast 22 to 25 minutes to the pound (weighed after stuffing). Keep uncovered throughout roasting time. Baste with hot water occasionally in which turkey fat or butter is melted. When breast meat and thighs are tender the turkey is done. Older birds should have a cup of water added after the first 40 minutes and the pan should be closely covered.

FOR SAUSAGE STUFFING

Cut bread in tiny cubes and toast very lightly. Cut sausage into tiny pieces and fry until crisply brown with onion. Add salt, pepper, celery, and parsley and blend with the bread. Be sure to include all the fat. If desired an additional ¼ cup melted butter may be added. Add enough boiling water to very slightly moisten the dressing (about 1 to 1½ cups). Use for stuffing turkey.

Your Figure, Madame!

FOR SILHOUETTE BULGES

By IDA JEAN KAIN

WITHOUT losing a pound of weight, you can tighten up the musculature and make your figure slim and youthful.

Some of you do not have to diet, but there is not a woman in the world who can get by without exercise. Only a firm musculature can hold the silhouette to smooth, streamlined curves.

It is true that bulges may be the sign of excess weight concentrated in certain areas, but they are just as likely to indicate lazy muscles—lack of exercise.

If you want to improve your figure without losing weight, forget about dieting. What you need is exercise to take off the inches in measurements that should be reduced. Exercise is the measure that changes proportions.

• • •

If you are dieting to lose weight, however exercise is more important than ever, for as the pounds are removed there is an increased tendency to flabbiness. Unless you exercise diligently to strengthen the muscles of your problem measurements the [illegible] will be more pronounced with the weight loss.

Exercise may be specific, general or both. Such activities as walking, swimming and sports of all kinds keep you feeling like a million dollars, but you must look to specific exercise to correct any disproportionate measurements and to beautify the figure.

The two measurements which practically always [illegible] specific exercise are the [illegible] [illegible] muscles of the [illegible] which [illegible] swinging [illegible] Here is a splendid leg swinging exercise which also strengthens the tummy muscles.

Position: Stand erect, grip a chair back with both hands for support. Stand about 12 inches from the chair.

Movement: Kick alternate legs backward. To be effective the backward kick must reach an angle of 45 degrees. Swing the leg even higher if possible. Perform for 50 counts. This exercise really gets results.

If you are an overweight, you also have to diet and here is a balanced slimming menu.

CHAPTER 68

"Pleeze, Meester Graham, don't be mad by your girl," I said, making my voice as near an imitation of Katie's wheedle as I could manage. "I feex everything faster dan leetle sheeps vag eets tail eef you only eat your nice breagfast, all ready by table yet."

He did not give in for a second. Then he grinned reluctantly.

"All right, all right," he drawled. "I suppose you can't help it because you came into the world without a bit of common sense and never have acquired it since. But if it makes you feel any better bring on your food. Where do I want me to sit?"

Right over there," I pointed to the chair before which on the table the grapefruit juice stood ready. Then I hurried to the kitchenette, [illegible] off the eggs, cooled and broke them in a cup and poured the coffee in [illegible]. As I set them before him and took away the fruit juice glass he looked up at me with a quizzical grin.

"Aren't these Katie's rolls?" he asked.

"Yes, they are," I answered.

"Then I forgive you," he said. "But it's a wonder you didn't have Jim kill a couple of chickens and have Katie roast them [illegible]."

MADGE IS SALUTED

I didn't [illegible] I replied demurely [illegible] I was afraid you might [illegible].

I went back to the kitchenette, poured the remainder of the coffee into a cup and brought it back to him, covered with a saucer.

"Here's your second cup if you want it. I'm [illegible] going to clean up the kitchenette."

"Want any help?" he asked courteously.

"No, indeed," I assured him. "Just eat your breakfast and enjoy it. Don't hurry.

I'll be ready to start as soon as you finish your cigarette," I told him. Dicky, drawing himself up with beer's touching, stood at attention, hand at forehead.

"Madame, I salute you," he said. You were right as always. Next time you may bring along the roasted chickens even on an afternoon jaunt."

Beatrice Lowell Makes Debut At Tea in Home

By BETTY ALDEN

IF YOU SEE a dozen or more debutantes dashing around to theaters or movies this evening, with dainty pink camellias on their lapels, you can spot them as having been pourers at the coming out party of Beatrice Lowell this afternoon . . .

Beatrice, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Lowell, is being presented at a tea at the beautiful old mansion of her parents on Mt. Vernon street . . . and each deb who takes her turn presiding at the tea or coffee urns is to be given a camellia corsage . . .

FRANCES LOWELL

An harmonious color scheme of pink and lavender has been chosen for the party . . . The debutante's gown of pale pink taffeta with a bolero jacket of pink and silver brocade, blends beautifully with her mother's gown of deep violet satin . . . Miss Lowell is carrying an arm bouquet of pale blue delphinium and pink camellias, and a hand bouquet of lavender lace flowers has been chosen to harmonize with Mrs. Lowell's gown . . .

The artistic decorations for the party have been designed and arranged by Mrs Arthur Beale of Chestnut street . . . An antique gold screen twined with southern vines and clusters of larkspur shading from pale pink to lavender forms the background for the receiving line . . . and in each of the tall French doors looking out on historic Mt. Vernon street are tall gold pedestals holding large clusters of golden snapdragon and greens . . .

The tea table is covered with a gold damask cloth with a centerpiece of pink and lavender bird of paradise . . . and the silver tea and coffee service and the candleabras gleam in the soft glow of candlelight throughout the room . . .

Among the pourers are the Misses Constance Brooks, Florence Forbes, Catherine Little, Ellen Poore Moseley, Elizabeth Osborne, Katharine Putnam, Faith Richardson, Josefa Richmond, Nancy Stevens and Sally [illegible] . . .

Miss Lowell graduated last June from the Beaver Country Day School [illegible] she is a sister of Miss Frances Lowell, who made her debut two seasons ago . . .

Open House at Hospital Attracts Many

THE MEMBERS of the ladies aid committee acted as pourers and hostesses for the open house at the Infants' Hospital yesterday afternoon . . . but the real hosts and hostesses to the several hundred guests who made an inspection tour of the baby wards, were the tiny inmates . . . Of course, they did not realize what brought the sudden influx of interested visitors, yet many flashed courageous welcoming smiles through the glass of their enclosures . . . or gurgled and waved a diminutive hand . . . while others slept blissfully through it all totally unaware of the faces wreathed in sympathetic motherly smiles which were peering at them through the glass . . .

After each group of visitors had made an inspection tour of the hospital under guidance of one of the members of the ladies aid they adjourned to the library where tea was served by the ladies committees of both the Infants' and Children's Hospitals . . . The open house day was part of the program of the Community Crusade which is holding similar affairs at most of the charitable organizations which participate in the Community Federation . . .

Mrs Ernest B. Dane, Jr., chairman of the ladies' committee, was busy helping to see that everything ran smoothly . . . Her nice dress of black crepe was trimmed with gold kid applique and she wore a small veiled turban . . . Assisting her were Mrs. Aldred Kidder 2d, Mrs. William L. Shearer, 3d, very attractive in a black dress with a long fringe tassel decorating her chic hat, Mrs Charles Francis Adams, Jr, Mrs Philip Stockton and Miss Susan Brewer, who wore the suit of the day . . . a lovely currant red rough wool dress and matching swagger jacket with a red hat and even a reddish veil fluttering around her shoulders . . . Miss Brewer was accompanied by Mrs. Jackson Turner and Julia Barbour . . . Mrs. Albert Bradley Carter and Mrs. William C. Cox were two of the energetic guides who walked miles during the course of the afternoon, leading visitors from ward to ward . . .

A great many Junior League provisionals dropped in to inspect the hospital as part of their provisional training course . . . and most of them were so interested in the treatment given the children that they voiced the hope that they can be placed there when it comes time to do their volunteer service work . . . Florence Dalton, Nancy Peabody, Daphne Withington, Nancy Tucker, Susan Brooks, Nancy Nye, Mary Eliot and Susan Storey were just a few of the fifty or more debs who appeared . . .

Spending Winter in Rome

MR. AND MRS. MASON HAMMOND of Cambridge are missing from the Boston social circle this winter . . . for they are living in Rome, Italy, where Mr. Hammond is head of the classical department of the American Academy . . . Mr. Hammond, who is the son of Mrs. Samuel Hammond of Boston, has a sound classical background for his new position, having been an assistant professor at Harvard for several years . . .

A graduate of Harvard, where he was a Rhodes scholar, he also studied at Oxford University in England . . . He belongs to the Somerset Club, and the Hasty Pudding and Signet Clubs . . . Mrs. Hammond was Florence Pierson of New Orleans before their marriage two and a half years ago . . .

* * *

Before going on to the stadium Saturday afternoon to cheer for the Crimson or Blue, as the case may be, a prominent group of socialites will be entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Tudor of Cambridge . . . while in town on Marlborough street another group will attend a party at which Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Grew will be host and hostess . . .

* * *

Mrs. Frank M. Vaughan of Bay State road is busy helping to perfect plans for an interesting pre-Christmas bazaar and dance to benefit the Massachusetts Osteopathic Hospital, which will be held December 11 at the Hotel Vendome . . . The affair, entitled Mrs. Santa Claus' Store, promises to be very original and unusual . . . Miss Elsie Winsor Bird of Brookline, chairman of the committee, will impersonate Mrs. Santa Claus, and among the surprises [illegible] away in her pack till bazaar day are a couple of fuzzy little [illegible] which will be given away as prizes, a form and posture [illegible] for boys and girls, a bridge tournament and a plan for [illegible] dancing till midnight

JANE HARTE VIRGINIA PROUT

It hardly seems natural to see Jane Harte and Virginia Prout in day time dresses, because during the past two or three weeks they have been part of the fluffy feminine parade at the biggest debutante balls of the season. They are both newly elected members of the Vincent Club. Miss Prout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Prout, made her debut at a dance at The Country Club a week or so ago and Miss Harte, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harte, has her own party to look forward to.

Percentages Be Hanged!

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When a player reaches the point where he knows when to try for a finesse and when not to try, he is well on the road to expertness.

As a novice he had to concentrate all his attention on the mere mechanics of a finesse, simple as they are. Unfortunately, many players are so delighted with their mastery of this elementary subject that they go on finessing gleefully at each and every opportunity.

They fail to realize that the "when" of a finesse is much more important than the "how."

Drab Divorce Ends 'Perfect Love Story'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

And so Mrs. De Trafford has won a divorce. You remember the case, perhaps, if you're past debutante age.

The facts are: Mrs. De Trafford, one of our own middle-western girls, was married to a Frenchman, Count de Janze, who seems to have been a very decent sort.

The scene of the "overwhelming love drama between the American born Countess and a young Englishman" was Africa.

It seems that all parties concerned had gone to the Dark Continent to shoot big game. When people have too much money and too much leisure they usually go off somewhere and kill something, preferably big game.

Between [illegible] and [illegible] waiting to be [illegible] the Countess de Janze and the handsome young Englishman who very likely had sought to ease his boredom by killing something too, became strongly attracted to each other.

Young De Trafford was the son of Sir Humphrey De Trafford, a wealthy baronet and good to look upon. Ladies had long found him irresistible.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Several months ago a young salesman came into the office and we became acquainted there.

He asked to take me out a couple of times but I'd never want to go because I thought we hadn't met properly.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I see him almost daily. While he's always polite and speaks to me he never asks me to go out with him and now I wish he would.

Do you think it would be all right if I asked him to a game [illegible] or should I wait until I am asked again?

Don't Let Business Force You Out, Says Noted Health Head

This is the third of a series of 12 articles by Dr. Bundesen, head of Chicago's health department and distinguished authority on public health. If you are a shopper tomorrow's article will be of special interest to you.

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

DR. HERMAN BUNDESEN
Gives Health Formula

Just about the time there are important briefs to get out, or plans to be drawn, perhaps several of your indispensable assistants are home with a cold.

I suggest you have a health plan for your office to prevent the [illegible] of your force during the winter months. Let every employe understand that he must not come to work if he is ill. Tell him that if he will stay at home, go to bed and take the proper measures to build up his resistance to the "cold" at its beginning he may check its effects. The next day he may have thrown it off.

Remember that once a cold starts and runs its course of several weeks everybody in the office will be exposed to the infection. Of course when that happens, the only thing to do is to send home the person suffering with the cold, so that his chances of getting pneumonia will be lessened and so that the rest of the office force will be protected from the infection.

WATCH YOUR HANDS

All employes should be cautioned about putting their hands to their faces. Just this simple, sanitary measure will prevent many a person from being infected by a cold or flu germs he may have picked up somewhere.

The office should be well ventilated but not drafty. Cold air blowing on the back will cause congestion of the lining membrane of the nose and will thus make it easier to catch cold. Often the air in offices is too dry. In that case the linings of the nose and throat are dried up and that condition makes it easier for one to catch cold.

How often a man who has an important conference insists on keeping his appointment when his head and body ache, when he knows he is coming down with a cold. That's a dangerous business. It is just as unscientific and unsound to do that with your body as it is to go ahead with a contract that is poorly drawn, hoping that everything will work out all right. To neglect a cold because you are so busy you cannot take time to rest at home often is the first step in getting pneumonia.

EAT A LIGHT LUNCH

To the professional or business man I say: [illegible] the speed of business interfere with proper eating.

Loading up with a big meal at noon, eating far more than you need, is a mistake that so many [illegible] make. Brain work [illegible] an amazingly small amount of [illegible], and if you are not doing much physical work reduce the amount of food you eat.

A bowl of soup, a salad or a small lunch and a glass of milk with some fruit are ample for the average business man. That's good advice for building resistance and for keeping down that waistline.

Every pound added to your belt line is a year off the life line.

Remember that pneumonia is particularly severe with overweight people. Take outdoor exercise every day. Remember, too, that the body gets sluggish and less able to [illegible] the hazards the cold weather brings. A brisk walk is a fine tonic. Indoor gymnasium work is an excellent way to conserve your health in the winter time.

I ask you: Is there any sense in golfing and horseback riding all summer and then suddenly stopping all activity in winter? Keep up your physical activity in some form all winter every day. To get all tired out on Saturday and Sunday and then to hibernate the rest of the week, is bad health practice.

DAILY REST PERIOD

Try to find a rest period during each day. A ten-minute nap will do wonders in refreshing you and in building your reserve.

Watch these things . . . don't overeat; exercise daily; get plenty of rest; relax whenever possible, at least ten minutes a day; stay in bed when you feel you are coming down with a cold . . . and, you'll stand a fine chance of cheating the pneumonia bug this winter.

[illegible], let me urge you to have a health audit made from time to time—at least every six months. You do it in your business. Surely you owe the same consideration to [illegible].

Time and again I have seen some disease [illegible] which could have been corrected before it had developed into a chronic [illegible]. [illegible]

Plans for the most elaborate reception ever to be accorded the youthful traveler are being formulated and will be announced soon by President Mitton.

Damon Runyon

We have received a number of letters from our omniverous readers in the past month or so, asking why we have not written anything lately about the Dade County folks.

The answer, of course, is that we have not been in Dade County, which is in Florida, for quite a spell, and therefore had no first hand information as to the goings on of the folks down yonder.

It was our shrewd conjecture, however, that by this time the Dade County folks had put away for the winter season that gay and carefree manner which is their characteristic in the summer and assumed a wariness born of long experience with the visiting automobile drivers from the various sections of the United States of America.

For about six or seven months of the year the Dade County folks can skip back and forth across their boulevards with their minds in the clouds, and a song in their hearts, knowing that the danger of assassination in traffic is then at a reasonable minimum. The summer drivers are home-grown and respectful of their neighbors' pedestrian rights and safety.

IN MIDST OF PERILS

But when winter comes and the station-car Jehus pilots from all over the land begin infesting Dade County the home folks realize that they are living in the midst of perils and conduct themselves accordingly.

The Dade County folks know when their neighbors are going to make a sudden turn, but it is not easy to call the same maneuver on drivers from Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Colorado and Idaho all at the same time.

However, by way of satisfying our readers' thirst for information about the Dade County folks, we called up one of our trusted Miami agents the other day, a Mr. George Hussey, president of the Artists and Writers' Club down there, and a fellow who gets around quite a bit.

Mr. Hussey meets all incoming and speeds all outgoing trains. He meets the incoming to welcome the strangers. He attends the outgoing just to have a train handy in case he may suddenly be apprised that he ought to leave town.

Mr. Hussey is a sort of [illegible] in those parts and if anybody knows what is stirring down here, it is Mr. Hussey.

ATLANTA OR NEW ORLEANS

"Hello, Mr. Hussey," we said, "what's the scandal?"

"Oh, hello," said Mr. Hussey. "Say, do you know that Miami is now the top town in population in Florida?"

"You don't tell us!" we said, in astonishment. "Why, how on earth did that happen?"

"It's because of the population increase in the past two years," replied Mr. Hussey. "It's only a question of a short time when we will pass Atlanta."

"What are you picking on Atlanta for?" we asked. "That's a nice town, too. Why not New Orleans?"

"All right, then," said Mr. Hussey. "New Orleans it is. Wait, now. Don't hang up yet."

Then Mr. Hussey proceeded to reel off a statement of statistics with such fluency that we suspect he had it all typed out there at his finger tips. He said Greater Miami (that's Dade County) is already to entertain several millions of visitors for the next hundred days.

PREPARED FOR RUSH

He said that $100,000,000 has been spent in building in Greater Miami (that's still Dade County) in the past three years, so they are now prepared to handle 25 per cent more cash customers than last season.

He spoke of 35 motion picture houses, 70 night clubs, 15 golf courses, hundreds of tennis courts, 300 charter fishing boats, miles of ocean bathing, dozens of recreation parks, and faster transportation facilities in planes, trains and boats to Miami.

He mentioned four dog tracks, two horse tracks and a Jai-La Fronton. He painted a picture of a region teeming with sports and social activity. He had us bewildered, and slightly enchanted and all the time the telephone company was running up charges on us.

HUSSEY'S SLOGAN

"Have you heard my latest slogan?" demanded M. Hussey. "'You haven't been anywhere 'til you've been to Miami.'"

"No, we haven't heard it," we said. "What is it?"

"Why, that's it," said Mr. Hussey. "What I just said—'You haven't been——'"

"All right," we said, "but isn't there any scandal?"

"Only what I told you," said Mr. Hussey. "It is only a question of a short time when we will pass Atlanta in population. I mean New Orleans."

"That isn't scandal," we said. "That's just a threat."

"It'll be a scandal to Atlanta if it happens," said Mr. Hussey. "I mean New Orleans."

Brazil Fascist Coup Stirs U. S. Congress

Our Own Corporative Structure Now Being Studied

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—The setting up of a corporative Fascist state in Brazil has aroused more apprehension in Congress than students of international politics have let on.

It has also started some of them studying the corporative structure which has been set up in this country, and under which an astonishingly large part of government is functioning—a structure incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

More will be heard of this as the spirit of independence spreads in Congress.

Most persons doubtless think of the extraordinary power to make tariff treaties, which Congress has surrendered into the hands of the President, as the principal instance of unusual delegation. More attention will be paid to this, as the country comes to realize that, under cover of an allegedly protective system, the United States is gradually being placed on a free trade basis.

Yet while an international policy is being followed by the State Department, other branches of the government are basing their programs—notably the farm program—on the theory of self-contained nationality. The two things mix like oil and water. It confuses the whole economic structure.

What the current checking up of delegated power has disclosed in other fields is that to date President Roosevelt has issued 729 executive orders, having the effect of law.

Getulio Vargas may well claim that Brazil remains a democracy though his tongue is in his cheek when he says it. But certainly no such power has yet been conferred upon him as Mr. Roosevelt possesses.

But in addition Mr. Roosevelt is operating under numerous corporations under the laws of Delaware, with such powers as may be delegated or assigned to, or conferred upon the corporation by the President of the United States of America" and to have "perpetual existence."

We think of the extraordinary and bewilderingly manifold activities of government today as being conducted by the government.

Actually power of government has passed to innumerable corporations having perpetual existence. For example P. W. A. is a [illegible] [illegible] the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation. So [illegible] the Electric Home and Farm Authority [illegible] the Commodity Credit Corporation. The [illegible] now being studied at the Senate.

The Brazilian coup of Vargas is already having an effect upon the President's plan to reorganize the whole Federal executive structure in a way that would [illegible] increase the President's power.

As sentiment against Mr. Roosevelt [illegible] for a third term increases, Congress becomes more reluctant to increase the power of some other President. Conferences are under way to block reorganization at the Senate.

Jail in Iowa Never Locked

Town's Cage Minus Prisoner for Years

RUSSELL, Ia. (INS)—This little community in southern Iowa probably is the only town in United States that boasts of having a jail that is never locked.

The jail, an iron cage behind the Town Hall, has not been used for so many years that the lock became lost and "city fathers" have neglected to buy a new one.

When not used for council meetings, the town hall houses an ancient fire pump, an old fire ladder and a chemical fire truck which until recently pulled the pumper.

Russell is known throughout Iowa as the ideal small town, because of its economic solvency, lack of criminal problems, and its schools and churches.

New 'Fool-Proof' Flying Diet

BERLIN (INS) — A "flying diet" consisting of tomatoes and fresh salad is recommended as the most efficient means of avoiding air sickness by Arthur Hove, veteran German air steward who has already flown about 700,000 miles and thereby established what might unofficially be called a world's record for international air hosts.

Fire Auto Painter Mispells 'Chief'

DANBURY, Ct. (INS)—The new car Danbury bought for its fire chief was perfect in every respect except one—the painter who lettered it couldn't spell.

There was a great guffawing among the firemen when the new car rolled up to the door of headquarters with "fire cheif" beautifully inscribed in gold letters on the doors. Back it went to the painter for revised spelling of chief.

Catching himself running through a traffic light here he placed charges against himself. Then he held a formal [illegible], accusing himself of the misdemeanor and pleading guilty. Next he fined himself $1 and costs and did not suspend [illegible].

Dobie's Secondary Players Strong

—By JACK CONWAY—

BOSTON COLLEGE'S strong replacements will send it into its game with Boston University on Saturday a favorite with those persons who like to wager a few bobs on the probable outcome of gridiron clashes.

Mr. Boston

Gil Dobie has some of the finest football material in the East. If his first string players should get cracked up on Saturday, he has second and third string players who are almost as good as his regulars.

Football has become a game much like hockey in the matter of replacements. Unless a team has mighty fine second and third string material, it finds the going very rough in the latter stages of a bruising contest.

A second string player 15 per cent below a top man in ability will outplay the star with higher rating if the latter is tired. This is why football coaches keep shifting their lineups in gruelling contests.

Boston College has been particularly fortunate in securing the services of some of the better schoolboy and prep school players who have gained fame in recent years. These youngsters have been properly drilled in the Dobie system and are ready to show at their best in the game against Boston University.

Boston University's starting lineup will be as strong as the one that will represent Boston College. Pat Hanley has one of the best coached elevens in the East. In addition to being well coached, Boston University is saturated with the Hanley spirit. This means Boston College will have a real battle from the opening kickoff.

Everett Marshall's Title Drive

EVERETT MARSHALL will place his claim to the world's heavyweight wrestling champion in jeopardy when he tangles up with Marvin Westenberg of Tacoma, Washington at the Garden tonight. Westenberg is one of the better heavyweight wrestlers, and will give Boston and New England fans a true line on Marshall.

Marshall has more title recognition than any other wrestler. He has been hailed as world's champion by the Illinois Athletice Commission, and by most other wrestling bodies in the middle West. The South and Southwest also look to the Billy Sandow grappler as the king pin of the big fellows.

Marshall is 29 years old, five feet ten and a half inches tall, and weighs 220 pounds. He has the necessary power and speed to beat the average run of heavyweight wrestlers.

Billy Sandow must be given credit for forcing his way into the Boston wrestling circle. Yvon Robert has been the golden haired youth in New England and in Canada, and a strong effort was made to keep Marshall out of New England.

Sandow, one of the old line managers and the man responsible for Strangler Lewis becoming world's champion, believes Marshall can defeat Robert, Casey, O'Mahony, Clark and any of the other wrestling stars. Bill insists Marshall will prove his exceptional ability by knocking Westenberg off tonight.

I am curious to find out just how good a wrestler Marshall is, and so I shall be parked in the press pew when festivities get underway at the Garden tonight.

Great Harvard Reunion Saturday

THERE WILL be hundreds of reunions of old Harvard grads at the football game in the Stadium on Saturday. It has been years since Harvard men from distant points showed so much interest in a Harvard-Yale game.

During recent years most Harvard graduates living some distance from Boston gave the excuse of business for not attending the annual clash with Yale. The truth of the matter was they didn't wish to see Harvard beaten. They could not get enthusiastic about a long trip to Cambridge or to New Haven when the best they could look for was a Harvard defeat.

With Harvard having a good chance of defeating Yale on Saturday Harvard graduates from all parts of the country are planning to move on to Cambridge. There is an especially large delegation coming here from New York.

If Harvard wins in the Stadium there will not be any limit to the after game celebrations.

Paul Barnett, capable director of athletics at Yale, informs me the strength of the Harvard team has also steamed up new football interest among followers of the Eli. Yale men know Clint Frank and his gallant team will have a terrific battle when they play the Crimson. The many uncertainties surrounding the game have made them anxious to witness it.

If Harvard has not any occasion for a victory celebration on Saturday night, you may be certain that the sons of Old Eli will stage one.

B. U. Mentor Works On New Offense For Eagles

How times have changed!

For the first year since the rivalry between Boston University and Boston College was inaugurated back in 1921, the Terriers are given a chance to win.

Today the quoted odds are 10 to 7 on Boston College but there are plenty of Terrier supporters who are coming through with the hard, cold cash.

At Boston University the students have set up Coach Pat Hanley as a miracle coach in view of what he has accomplished with [illegible] and his [illegible] was so confident he would field a team which would come through with an upset victory.

This optimism has kept Hanley awake nights as he sets about evening [illegible] and checking [illegible] his offense to figure just what [illegible] against the powerful Boston College line.

The chances are that the Terriers will [illegible] everything [illegible] enough. Those who saw the Villanova game wondered why the Terriers did not [illegible] in the way of "razzle-dazzle" [illegible] which is typical of the Warner system.

Among those who wondered was Hanley himself. All week the Terrier mentor had worked on a new offense and then when the Wildcats [illegible] the quarterbacks [illegible] the new [illegible] but a straight offense which was [illegible].

The Eagles [illegible] that if they stop Nechtem they stop the Terriers. They [illegible] fairly good but they had better not forget about a [illegible] named Fang [illegible] Bas [illegible].

Navy Eleven Fears Tigers

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 17 (INS). —The Navy expects to meet a real team of Tigers at Princeton Saturday, [illegible] to win at least one victory over a major team in its last [illegible] season.

For Princeton it will be the final game of 1937 while the navy, looking forward to its meeting with the Army a week ahead, will find it necessary to hold back both as to the use of its players and its attack.

Lem Cooke, the Navy's backfield [illegible] of the present season, will not start and may not be used at all. Also Hardwick will [illegible] any player who shows the least sign of injury or fatigue. Everything must be subordinated to winning the Army game.

Wysocki Best End of Season, Says Warner

Cornell Adopts Non-Transfer Grid Ruling

By MURRAY KRAMER

Boston's biggest football Saturday in years from a standpoint of crowds, will be this coming week end . . . although there are only two games record gatherings are expected at each . . . Harvard-Yale is already a sellout and, with the Boston College-Boston University game the sole remaining attraction the best battle in the history of this rivalry is expected . . . some figure the crowd will hit between twenty-five and thirty thousand.

Pop Warner

Pop Warner, famed Temple grid mentor, says Jim Wysocki is the best end of the year . . . [illegible] saw the Boston University-Villanova game last Thursday will certainly agree with Pop . . . Wysocki was easily the best end to play in Boston this year and is certain to make many All-American teams.

Whether it is because Cornell is playing Harvard next year or whether the Big Red is afraid that the Ivy schools will drop them in the future is not known, but the recent rulings at Ithaca are quite interesting . . . Cornell has adopted the same rules as the Big Three and will permit no transfer students to play.

When the Los Angeles bulldogs were in town to play the [illegible] [illegible] stories were [illegible] about the [illegible] crowds the Bulldogs draw in Los Angeles . . . a recent article in a Coast paper [illegible] the Pacific [illegible] and said that there was little interest there because Eastern teams mean nothing and that unless the West Coast pro teams started to play local talent the pro game would not come out.

They certainly go to extremes to get players down in Texas where college competition is very keen . . . take Slingin' Sam Baugh, for example, the lad who forward passed Texas Christian to fame . . . Sam originally entered the University of Texas, was there two days and [illegible] and [illegible] up at T. C. U. the next year . . . if that shift hadn't been made Dana Bible would probably still be at Nebraska and not [illegible] would still be coaching at Texas.

It's quite a mess out at the University of Michigan over the fact that five of the freshmen are supposed to have been openly subsidized . . . loyal Michigan alumni claim it is an unjust rumor started by alumni anxious to get rid of Harry Kipke.

Duquesne believes in keeping its athletes tough . . . Joe Maras, the captain, has spent the last four summers working in iron cre mines in Minnesota . . . it is hard to see why anybody at a Pittsburgh school would have to go to the mining regions of Minnesota . . . Harry Stuhldreher, the Wisconsin coach, came down to the Pennsylvania mining district and picked up a back known as Baptiste Mazza, who they say will be a sensation within two years.

Alabama is certainly trying to sell itself to the Rose Bowl . . . the latest publicity from down South concerns a girl cheer leader named Martha Witt, who is also an acrobat . . . some schools will try anything for national recognition and a shot at the West Coast classic . . . speaking of Rose Bowl, if California beats Stanford Saturday, its game with Georgia Tech scheduled for December 27 is automatically cancelled until next year . . . the original contract stated that if California was the West Coast selection, the game with Georgia Tech would be played on December 27, 1938.

Gaels, Rams Outstanding Section Game

St. Mary in Position To Wreck Fordham's Bowl Aspirations

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP).—There'll be more angles than the mere four corners of the football field when Fordham's unbeaten Rams meet the hobbled once-galloping Gaels of St. Mary's at the Polo Grounds Saturday.

For one thing it's the seventh renewal of a trans-continental gridiron rivalry that always brings out the fanciest, if not the best, in the rival tub-thumping corps. For another, it once again will find an underdog Gael eleven in a position to throw a mean body block into Fordham's Pasadena-inclined aspirations.

For still a third, it will bring together able representatives of the football sections which are leading the nation in intersectional competition. Major far western teams have come unbeaten through five games with representatives of other sections. The East's record shows 35 victories in 68 starts.

GOING TOUGHER

As the season nears its end, however, the going gets tougher and the Eastern record slips back closer and closer to the 500 mark. It was under that the past week end with only five victories in 11 chances.

Pittsburgh, Manhattan, Boston College, Harvard and West Virginia were the winners, against Nebraska, North Carolina State, Kentucky, Davidson and Toledo. Victors over the East's representatives were Notre Dame, Michigan State and Ohio University of the Mid-West, Maryland and Miami of the South, and Texas Tech from the Southwest.

Teams from below the Mason-Dixon line also had hard sledding, with only two victories in seven games, while the Southwest won [illegible] of its engagements and the far West, represented [illegible] surprise defeat of [illegible] teams, emerged unscathed.

This Saturday's traditional [illegible] and conference [illegible] the program [illegible] seven [illegible] [illegible] the first time this season that the East will [illegible] be represented [illegible] half of these games.

RAMS GAME OUTSTANDING

Due to Fordham's [illegible] ranking and [illegible] consideration for the Rose Bowl the Rams' clash with St. Mary's will be the outstanding intersectional attraction.

The others will send Arkansas against George Washington, [illegible] against Texas Tech, Marquette against Duquesne, Arizona against Kansas, [illegible] against [illegible] and U. C. L. A. against [illegible].

Greenleaf Wins Billiard Title

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17 (AP).—Ralph Greenleaf [illegible] pocket billiard [illegible] $15 [illegible] prize money and his 16th world championship [illegible] today for his playoff victory last night over Irving Crane, 23, of [illegible], N. Y.

The New York city veteran defended his championship [illegible] match [illegible] over Crane ended with a best run of 76. His winnings [illegible] was 125 to [illegible] in 11 innings. The runner-up prize [illegible] Crane $1100.

Willie Mosconi of Philadelphia captured third place and a prize of $800 by defeating Jimmy Caras of Wilmington, Del., 125 to 96 in an accompanying playoff that went 18 innings. Caras winnings were $600.

In the title match it was Greenleaf hands down from the second inning. Crane had a run of 11 at the start of the second but the champion ran up to 17 in his half [illegible] and was never headed from that point.

Crane was 18 to 22 going into the fifth inning, scratched for three straight innings to incur a penalty of 15. His best run was 11.

Cooper, Little 4-Ball Leaders

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 17 (INS)—"Lighthouse" Harry Cooper, Chicago, and Lawson Little, San Francisco, opened Pinehurst's new tournament season with fireworks when they returned a best-ball score of 33-30—63 for the first round in the 36-hole pro event which opened the Mid-South Golf Championship at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Both players contributed to the low round, which set a new course record for the event.

Conrad Balentine Lost to Tigers

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 17 (INS).—Conrad Balentine, regular Princeton guard, who injured his left foot in the Yale game, will be kept out of the Navy game here Saturday, it was announced today. Marshall Favored Over Westenberg In N. E. Mat Bow at Garden Tonight

West-South Champ Wants Yvon, Danno, Casey Et Al.

By JACK CONWAY

Everett Marshall will open his drive to wreck all wrestling opposition in New England when he tries to pin the sturdy Marvin Westenberg of Tacoma, Washington, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden tonight.

Marshal is a slight favorite to win. If Marshall conquers Westenberg, he can go on to greater wrestling heights. In time he may be able to force Casey, O'Mahony, Clark and Robert to meet him.

Westenberg is in excellent condition for the tussle and insists he will burst the Marshall bubble. A victory for Westenberg would destroy all of Marshall's title claims.

The West and the South look upon Marshall as champion. If he can conquer mat rivals in New England he will be top man in the mat world.

The wrestling title has been a sort of football since Dan O'Mahony lost to Dick Shikat in New York.

The American Wrestling Association refused Shikat title recognition on the ground the New York match was an exhibition. Marshall is able to trace his title claims back to Shikat.

Robert, on the other hand, became "champion" when he won from O'Mahony. This was recognized as a championship tussle by the American Wrestling Association.

There will be a healthy purse for the winner of tonight's bout. The $1000 forfeit posted by each wrestler will be tossed into the purse along with 50 per cent of the gate receipts.

The pot will then be split on a basis of 75 per cent for the winner and 25 per cent for the loser.

Ice Prospects Bright at Tech

George Owen's array of veteran hockey players, augmented by the recent appearance of several newcomers, make ice conditions ideal for the Engineers.

For two years the Beavers have set out "in high" only to wind up in the ruck when injuries and lack of reserve material to plug the subsequent gaps have set the Beavers back on their heels.

This winter Owen has a different outlook on things. To start with an all-veteran line bolstered by another nearly as good one, plus a wealth of fast skating sophomores, is the reason for the display of optimism.

Three newcomers have also changed the aspect of things, even for the veterans. The newcomers to the Arena surface include Fred Lange, Gerald Grace and Richard Small. None of these men had ever reported for Tech hockey, but they reported at the last workout and gave the "regulars" cause for concern.

Capt. Richard Muther will hold forth at right wing. Muther has fully recovered from the effects of his broken leg, suffered a year ago, and now is in fine fettle for the season which opens against Boston University, on Dec. 3, at the Arena.

Blaik kept the first team from contact work, but ran the line-up that started against Cornell through signal drill and dummy scrimmage and emphasized protection for the big Green's booters.

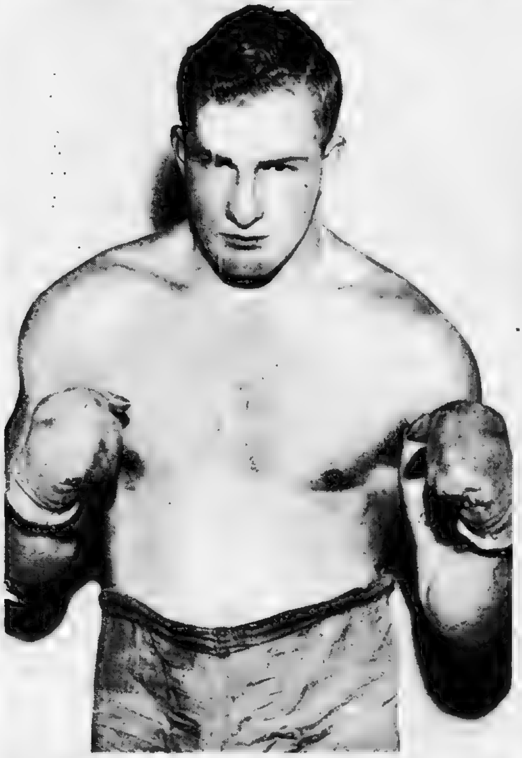
Well Named Is Bert Courage

Bert Courage Acclaimed As Sure-Fire Champion By Syracuse Ring Fans



Bert Courage, Hobart graduate, who is the upstate New York amateur heavyweight champion. He will be a member of the Syracuse team which will compete in the Eastern Finals of the Hearst All-America tournament to be staged at the Boston Garden December 6.

Heavyweight to Box In All-Eastern Finals Here

By SAM COHEN

Jack Sharkey was a great heavyweight, Gene Tunney was the boxing dandy of them all, Jack Dempsey probably was the greatest of all time.

But all of these heavyweights put together never got such a send-off as Bert Courage, upstate New York amateur heavyweight champion, who will be on the Syracuse boxing team which competes in the Hearst Eastern All-America finals here at Boston next month.

The name Bert Courage means little to amateur boxing fans here so we asked Bob Kenefick, sporting editor of the Syracuse Journal, to tell us something about the outstanding member of the Salt City team which will come to Boston.

HE ISN'T HUMAN!

And he did!

Listen to these Kenefickian encomiums:

"Bert Courage, upstate New York amateur heavyweight champion, is one of the brightest prospects on the heavyweight horizon . . .

"Graduate of Hobart College . . . Is 22 years old and the most sensational amateur boxer in simon-pure fistic history . . . Has scored 39 knockouts in 47 starts . . . Has lost only three bouts . . . Is a reformed southpaw and depends almost entirely on a shattering left hook which has never failed to knock out any man he hits with it.

"The son of a Utica, N. Y., Methodist minister . . . Biggest drawing card in New York State . . . One of his battles with Al Fields at Rochester, N. Y., last summer pulling $5336 through the clicking turnstiles at Red Wing Stadium . . . Beat Fields three times before capacity crowds and finally knocked him out in the third round of their last match.

A throwback to Jack Dempsey in many respects . . . Could make a fortune as a pro . . . Oodles of color, personality and punch . . . Brings crowds to their feet . . . Rough, tough and can take it . . . No science, but a grimly determined annihilator . . . No one has ever been able to trade punches with him and remain perpendicular.

During the past year has knocked out all but three fighters who faced him and he ruined them with body blows . . . Throws his right overhand hard and true . . . Is a swashbuckling, beautifully built athletic specimen . . . A picture in action . . . Fair sex loves him and his fan mail rivals that of Clark Gable's . . . Quiet, a gentleman out of the battle pits.

HYDE PARK BOY BEST

"Offers pour in to him in carload lots . . . Even Mike Jacobs wants to sign him . . . Won't turn pro for another year . . . Has three brothers, one a boxer, Guy Courage . . . Got his Bachelor of Arts Degree last June at Hobart . . . Brought that Geneva, N. Y., college more widespread publicity than even their undefeated football team . . . May take up missionary work in Liberia when he quits the ring . . . Father idolizes him as does everyone else . . . Dad has no objection to Bert's career among the pug uglies . . . Tall, well knit with panther speed and Dempsey's finishing qualities."

We appreciate Bob [illegible] champion [illegible] heavyweights [illegible] own New England A[illegible] America tournament ever. Bert Courage is going to have the time of his life [illegible] to punch his way [illegible] National All America [illegible] which will be conducted at the Boston Garden Dec 6.

Frank [illegible], Hyde Park heavyweight, right now looks like the best of the New England crop. Frank was beaten by Roy [illegible] in the All America tournament a year ago but he's a much improved fighter now and if he [illegible] heavyweight [illegible] Bert Courage on the chin that heavyweight will take the count.

The casualties among the coaches is growing more serious than among the players . . . Coach Bill Fox of Lynn Classical was taken to the hospital for an operation on his leg. Bill was hurt in the Lowell-Lynn Classical game when two players fell on the bench and an infection set in, making it necessary to operate.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

NEVER mind 'tendin' to the furnace now, Dad. Let little Jackie and Jill stay up awhile, 'aw please, Mom. Fred Allen is back in "Town Hall Tonight" between 9 and 10 o'clock (WNAC) this evening. And let's not answer the door-bell.

Waving a two-year non-cancellable contract aloft, backed by the makers of that massaging molar polish and toning up preparation which fizzes when two heaping teaspoons full hit a glass of water, Allen ambles back to the "mike" in Hollywood. Naturally, he seems "quite happy about the whole thing," as the Stroud Twins would say.

"N. F. T."

The return of the Allens, since Portland Hoffa will be on her hubby's arm or at least right on his heels, calls for rolling out of the red rug in radioland. Fred [illegible] [illegible] interest in the general coast-to-coast loud speaker scheme of things even to the Jack Benny broadcast of Sunday nights. Peter Van Steeden has [illegible] from New York to be [illegible] as band [illegible] [illegible] Von Zell also [illegible] nightly specialized [illegible] duties.

LOCAL FEAR

[illegible] heads haven't [illegible] when studio staffers from many stations hereabouts, most of them [illegible] with the American Federation of Radio Artists. [illegible] broadcast [illegible] program [illegible] reveals such names as Bing Crosby, Edgar Bergen, Rudy Vallee, Jack Benny, [illegible] and a host of outstanding others. The Boston branch [illegible] took place night before last with plans outlined for [illegible] the AFRA [illegible] at an early date.

* * *

In the concert classification this evening WEEI, opposing the first half of the Fred Allen airing, [illegible] the Jascha Heifetz marker will be on the dial [illegible] from 9 [illegible] p. m. It is the [illegible] period where Deems Taylor serves as critic and commentator.

* * *

Broadcasting of the "Gang Busters" boom-boom and siren screeching tonight will be based on the career of an [illegible] bad guy from Nebraska, bearing the plain and peaceful name of Fred Brown. That's there where the machine-guns and police whistles penetrate (WEEI) your parlor when it's 10 p. m.

* * *

LIKED LAST NIGHT

All that the last Friday evening radio preview of "The Hurricane" depicted in the way of adventurous drama, was doubled and redoubled upon seeing the screen play at the Colonial Theater premiere last night. That storm scene thrilled with a thrill only exceeded by the appreciation of co-starring dramatic portrayals by Dorothy Lamour, the radio lark, and John Hall, far and away the handsomest he-man husky to be filmed in many moons. One of those "I could watch it all over again" attractions certainly to be seen by all, [illegible] once.

* * *

The story of The Seeing Eye, the American organization which provides trained dogs to guide the blind, [illegible] Cavalcade of America program (WEEI) this evening from 8:00 to 8:30 p. m.

The dramatization of the famous institution to aid the blind will take the place of the [illegible] biography of Ottmar Mergenthaler, the inventor of the linotype, originally scheduled for [illegible] Cavalcade tonight.

LOCAL LATHER

There's a local program planner [illegible] countenance at this writing. Here's why. About eight or ten weeks back a chap approached said stager of Hub air shows with a[n] idea. The proposed program wasn't anything terrific, maybe, but one of those things [illegible].

It was considered [illegible] nonchalantly [illegible] who hasn't much comment to make as a result of an [illegible] just exactly what has been wanted for some time and it will be launched as a regular commercial feature early next month—in its original form from start to finish. Haw.

* * *

Remember the gridiron play of Harvard's here some years ago, meaning Barry Wood['s] [illegible] being dubbed "Putrid" by Ted Husing when the latter was reporting a gridiron game? Well, when Ted is the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner for the (WEEI) to be heard at 10:30 he will name 11 of the greatest players he ever watched and one of them will be—you guessed it, Barry Wood.

U. S. Income Major Trade Determinant

Worth Overshadowed By Other Figures Available

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The general business situation is usually weighed in terms of trade lines and, occasionally, by estimates of consumer income in the months to come. Figures on the national income rarely find a place of importance in the calculations of those who pretend to see into the future.

Despite the slight, the trend of the national income of the United States is a major factor in determining the future course of economic events. The reason that such important figures are neglected probably may be attributed to the natural tardiness of those who compile them. In retrospect they are undoubtedly of little use to speculators in stocks. However, the figures for the last few months unequivocally support the record of the markets. In September a new high recovery peak of $6,378,000,000 was established.

But it represented hardly any change from the August figure of $6,375,000,000. Comparing this record with the sharp seasonal increase of previous years clearly suggests that recovery halted. Estimates and guesswork are of little value in arriving at probable national income figures, but when the figure for October is available, even though it exceeds that of September, it is anticipated that further expansion will fall under normal expectations.

• • •

BOND MARKET OPINIONS

While there are differences of opinion regarding the possible course of stock prices, they really amount to very little when compared to the ideas one may hear expressed in bond circles. There are those who feel that only short term bonds of the highest type should be held at this time because of the uncertainty surrounding all markets. Others interpret conditions in an entirely different manner. Recent relative firmness of governments and best utilities is believed to reflect the fundamental condition of easy money rates, while weakness of rails in weeks gone by is said to have been dispelled by the prospects of favorable action by the ICC on the rate increase request.

• • •

Quite frankly it is all very confusing to this writer who, either wisely or timidly, seeks a middle course. And such a policy naturally dictates nothing more than a 50 per cent belief in either school of thought. All of which, quite obviously, paves the way for much criticism. Yet it does stand to reason that such a course, without committing one to a definite scheme of investment, allows a rapid choice between two possibilities without the great risks that would accompany flat allegiance to one or the other.

• • •

ACTION UNCERTAIN

While the old bromide that market action is good, but inconclusive, is hardly satisfactory at any time, it cannot be surmounted at present. Prices are fluttering around in uncertain fashion, and while it would be nice to say that the type of market action being witnessed fell in with our ideas of yesterday—in that buying showed up and stemmed price decline, and the only selling in evidence seemed to come from profit-taking—it must be admitted that rallies are not up to the standard. The chances are that inconclusive movements will rule until a better line on Washington developments is available.

Borah Warns of 'Political Pressure'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (INS)—Senator William E. Borah (R.), of Idaho moved into the current agitation over railroad applications for freight rate increases today, to warn against "political pressure" on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Borah introduced in the Senate a concurrent resolution placing the Congress specifically on record against seeking "in any way to influence" the action of the I. C. C. on the railroads' applications for the increase.

New Haven Wants Approval to Stand

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—The New York, New Haven and Hartford and Old Colony Railroads asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today to deny petitions of Massachusetts for rehearing of the railroad's proposal to abandon lines between Greenbush and Kingston, Mass., West Hanover and Hanover, Mass., and between Griffins, Ct., and Agawan Junction, Mass.

The railroads said the state filed no exceptions to a report proposed by a commissioner examiner recommending approval of the Greenbush-Kingston abandonment. It said the state entered no appearances at hearings in June on the other two proposed abandonments.

Stock Leaders Show Narrow Gains in Hesitant Market

Anti-War Plank Likely to Be Adopted

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—A strong anti-war movement is gradually becoming articulate within the ranks of organized business.

As a matter of fact, the subject is of such growing interest to American industrialists that an anti-war plank is likely to be adopted at the Congress of American Industry, which meets in New York, December 5 to 9.

Ever since the Nye committee in the Senate pilloried business and munitions interests for their part in the last war, business men have sensed that making profit out of war runs counter to the conscience of the American people.

In addition, thoughtful business men believe that war and its ultimate consequences cause important business depressions, involving huge financial losses and also a decline in the standing of business men among the people.

Penetrating industrial leaders recognize that war orders give only a temporary stimulus to business, which is followed by long term disequilibria and disturbances to the channels of trade.

Accordingly, they are likely to be sympathetic to an anti-war plank, provided it distinguished between defensive wars and others.

BLAME FOR DEPRESSIONS

Such a resolution will not only reflect the conviction of many business men, but will also help to dissociate the business man in the public mind from blame for depressions. An effort will be made to stress dislocations resulting from wars, as long term causes of widespread periods of unemployment and depression.

Business men believe that by clarifying their position on war they can avoid the building up of business baiting myths. In the past, it was widely charged that investment bankers, with loans outstanding in Europe, wanted the United States to join the last war on the side of the allies.

This time, the United States Treasury itself is the largest owner of foreign promises to pay, and collection this time is the business of the government, rather than the bankers.

Moreover, the Johnson act forbids new loans to nations now in default on war debt. Thirdly, there is a strong reluctance on the part of American investors to acquire large scale new foreign commitments at this time.

Another indictment of business men in the past centered around the belief that wars were engendered by undue zeal to acquire foreign trade.

At present there is no unanimity of thinking among American business men in regard to international trade. Those, with leanings toward internationalism, are articulate beyond the influence of their numbers through such organizations as the Foreign Policy Association and the National Foreign Trade Council and through such philanthropies as the Carnegie Peace Foundation.

BOOKKEEPING REALITIES

Yet the bookkeeping realities indicate that American business is nearly 95 per cent self contained, and that foreign trade is a mere tail to the dog of American business.

Although self-containment has not made much progress as an abstract ideal, it is slowly being approached as a mode of life through the progress of synthetic chemistry.

In some military countries, such as Germany and Japan, chemical substitutes are less satisfactory or more expensive in some instances, and are not used as long as the seas are open and natural products can be imported.

Yet they are nurtured in the laboratory for use in case of a naval blockade. In other instances syntehtic products are cheaper and better than nature's own.

Advocates of economic nationalism argue that competition for exports breeds war, and that a policy of concentrating on the home market can be reinterpreted in terms of promoting peace.

Mass. Industrial Employment Off

Payrolls decreased 8 per cent and employment 2.7 per cent in 1760 representative Massachusetts manufacturing establishments in October compared with September, the State Labor and Industries Department reported today.

The department said the condition apparently was due to curtailment in the textile and boot and shoe industries.

The report showed 295,644 persons were employed in the establishments in October and total wages amounted to $6,376,532.

Traders Adopt Cautious Attitude

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—Stock market leaders pushed hesitantly into higher ground today with advances of fractions to around a point.

Demand centered on steel, copper and aircraft shares, but in most instances price changes were narrow. Activity in general was only moderate and there were frequent lapses in ticker tape movement.

Wall Street focused most of its attention on Congress and possibilities for legislative aid to business. Traders, lacking positive developments, adopted a cautious attitude.

Higher near the third hour were U. S. Steel, National Steel, Bethlehem, United Air Lines, Boeing, Douglas, United Aircraft, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge, U. S. Smelting, American Can, Westinghouse, General Electric, du Pont, Union Carbide, Seaboard Oil, Pure Oil, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, North American, American Water Works, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Railway, Coca Cola and Eastman Kodak.

Down a bit were Santa Fe, Johns Manville, Caterpillar Tractor and American Smelting.

Bonds were mixed and narrow in quiet trading. Major commodities tended higher. European securities markets were quiet, with prices higher at Paris and Amsterdam and narrow in London.

CURRENT ITEMS

The "Iron Age" review of the week in the steel industry, forecasting a pickup over the next few weeks in railroad buying, was scanned carefully by boardroom followers of the steel shares.

The review, while not discounting the further drastic drop in operations this week, said the automobile industry was experiencing an increase in sales and a rapid reduction in inventories which might soon be reflected in new buying of steel.

Another item of interest was the report of the national industrial conference board, showing a decrease of 4.3 per cent in employment in the manufacturing industries at mid-November compared with the October figure. The Edison Electric Institute disclosed a more than seasonable decline in electric power production for the week ended Nov. 13.

At the beginning of foreign exchange dealings sterling was quoted at $5.01½, up 1-16 of a cent. The French franc was .00¼ of a cent higher at 3.40⅜ cents.

Berkshire Mill Earnings Gain

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 17 (INS)—Although they lost more than a quarter of a million dollars for the last three months, the Berkshire Fine Spinning Associates, Inc., made a net profit of $1,417,899.70 for the fiscal year ended in September, President J. H. McMahon announced today at the corporation's annual meeting.

"Owing to the severe slump in business, we were obliged to write down the value of our inventory at the end of the year," said President McMahon, "which not only did away with the expected profit for the fourth quarter, but resulted in a net loss for that period of $252,485.81."

Material curtailment in operations has been enforced by the present lack of demand, he added.

Vermont Sells $500,000 Bond Issue

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 17 (AP)—The state of Vermont today sold a $500,000 bond issue to finance new construction and repairs at state institutions. The premium was $10,500 and the interest rate 1.59 per cent, said by officials to be the lowest ever paid by the state.

The entire issue was taken over by a joint Boston syndicate composed of the First Boston Corporation and Brown, Harriman & Co. Fifteen submitted bids.

The bonds are payable, $50,000 annually, over a 10-year period.

More Jobs for 45-Year-Olds

Contrary to the general belief, census figures show that employment of persons aged 45 years or more is increasing.

Only 20 per cent of the nation's employes were 45 to 65 years old in 1900, whereas recent figures show 25.4 per cent of the employes are in this age group.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $2.25, payable January 15 to stock of record December 15.

Low Prices Spur Cottonseed Oil Boom

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Low prices have stimulated a boom in the use of cottonseed oil.

October consumption, 484,653 barrels, was largest for any month in the history of the trade. It was about double the like month a year ago.

For the first three months of the season which started August 1, consumption was 1,194,000 barrels, a rise of 58 per cent over the like period a year ago, the New York Produce Exchange reported.

At the start of the year the staple was selling for around 12 cents a pound. From that peak it fell to a 1937 low of 6.82 cents. Since that bottom was reached a few weeks ago, the price has picked up a little.

OTHER THINGS

Other things than price have served to shoot consumption ahead. Lard supplies have dipped 59 per cent under 1936. Imports of competing oils have fallen. The Spanish civil war has cut shipments of olive oil. Less soy bean and peanut oil has come into this country.

In back of the smaller shipments of these vegetable oils is a factor far removed from the normal play of supply and demand—war fears abroad. Vegetable oils, trade circles explain, have a relatively high glycerine content and Europe has been a heavy buyer, using the glycerine to make explosives.

Closely linked with consumption of cottonseed oil in this country is production of vegetable shortenings and compounds. Between 1934 and 1936, output of these products increased 33 per cent.

For years—until about five years ago—cottonseed oil constituted from 85 to 90 per cent of the ingredients in shortenings. High prices for the oil cut this percentage, and the drift to consumption of foreign oils brought it to 57 per cent in 1936. With the lower prices, however, have come a swing back to the greater use of cottonseed oil.

Electric Power Up 0.3 P. C.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—production of electricity in the United States for the week ended November 13 dropped 1.2 per cent to 2,176,557,000 kilowatt hours from 2,202,451,000 kilowatt hours in the previous week, but was .03 of 1 per cent over 2,169,480,000 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1936 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The more than seasonal decline carried the Associated Press index of power production down to 115.5, a new low for the year, from 116.8 the preceding week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 117.5.

The range for recent years follows:

	1937	1936	1935	1934	1933
High	125.2	119.8	105.5	97.4	91.9
Low	115.5	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

The institute reported the following percentage changes from the previous week according to major geographic areas: New England down 6.9, Middle Atlantic up 1.7, Central Industrial down 1.9, West Central up 0.8, Southern States up 0.9, Rocky Mountain up 17.9, Pacific Coast up 6.6.

Assoc. Gas Suspends Scrip Payments

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Associated Gas & Electric Company, in a letter to stockholders made public today, announced suspension of interest payments on the Series A and Series B convertible obligations.

Directors of the company said payment would not be justified in view of an adverse trend in current earnings.

Haney Analyzes President's Message

Says Roosevelt Does Not Understand Why There's Depression

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—The favorable and the unfavorable sides of the President's message to Congress appear in the first few paragraphs. He truly says that there is a "marked recession" in business, thereby implying the need of remedies. But he also alleges that a fairly steady advance had preceded for four years, and states that "the present decline has not reached serious proportions."

Probably never in our history were there four such unsteady and irregular years, with violent spurts and reactions, and certainly there was never so much unemployment.

This depression has already seen steel production drop to 36 per cent of capacity, and growing demands for relief from many thousands of workers recently out of employment in industry.

DOES NOT UNDERSTAND

It is fairly clear that Mr. Roosevelt does not yet understand why there has been any recession at all. Thus he says that, "despite some maladjustments, which can be corrected, conditions are not unfavorable." And he adds that industrial activity can advance to higher levels than any seen this year.

More specifically, he says that the banking system is not over-extended, inventories are not overlarge, construction is not excessive, and speculation is not such as to require liquidation. Apparently he does not realize that the banks are still loaded with PUBLIC debt, and that the credits so created have gone into over-extended PUBLIC works and GOVERNMENT speculations in cotton and real estate.

LACK OF CONFIDENCE

But at one point, the President rightly suggests that lack of confidence is the trouble. He says that the ultimate answer is "cordial and confident co-operation" between the government and its citizens. (His words are "citizens of every kind," but we may assume that this includes business men.)

What steps toward restoring confidence does he propose?

It seems to me as an economist that he takes as many steps backward as forward, and that the effect of the message upon business will therefore be negative.

He proposes to "TRY to increase the use of private capital to create employment." Then he says that if enterprise does not respond, the government will "take up the slack." That has the sound of a threat. Would "taking up the slack" mean more government in business?

He states that "full employment of both capital and labor" is needed, and refers to "free competitive enterprise" as being desirable. But then he suggests discrimination against big business and against "speculation."

ANOTHER AAA?

He says that "we must keep in mind the American democratic way." But then he, the executive, proceeds to tell the Supreme Court what "the true nature of the Constitution" is, and to urge Congress to try another AAA.

Finally, the President again cites Professor Sprague's statement that business men have retarded recovery by trying to maintain prices. Here there is a trace of the thought that perhaps we can be led to believe that business is responsible for this "marked recession."

Fortunately, the record is too clear. It was the President himself who claimed responsibility for the "recovery." It was he who last spring attacked not only the Supreme Court, but also the high price of steel, high activity in the heavy industries, and speculation.

Furthermore, the price policies of business are largely the result of government policies requiring high wages and high farm prices. There can be no better illustration of the folly of price maintenance than the administration's cotton policies during the last four years.

All in all, however, the political outlook is improved. The President has dropped the word must, and is beginning to make concessions to business. Anyhow, Congress shows more independence than at any time in over four years.

Potter Elected To Bank Post

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, was re-elected a class B director.

Steel Output Rate Down To 35 P. C.

Drop So Drastic That It May Bring Own Correction

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Prospects for early improvement in demand for automobile steel were cited by Iron Age today in its weekly summary of iron and steel trade conditions.

"So drastic has been the drop in steel operations, it may furnish its own correction," it said. "The automobile industry, although proceeding more cautiously than had been expected, is experiencing an increase in sales, which if continued will bring higher production, provided new threats of labor trouble do not materialize.

"The small takings of steel by the automobile manufacturers indicate a rapid reduction of inventories which may result soon in replenishing buying."

Steel ingot output was estimated by the trade journal at 35 per cent of the country's capacity, lowest since 1934, excepting one week of July, 1935. Last week's average was 41 per cent.

"The belief persists in the steel trade," continued the summary, "that the Interstate Commerce Commission will render a speedy decision on the plea of the railrod for higher freight rates and that a favorable result will be almost immediately followed by inquiries for cars and locomotives.

CONSTRUCTION FIELD

"In the construction field there is a fair amount of public work, but private projects have almost disappeared. Efforts at Washington to reassure business and to check deflationary tendencies may be almost immediately helpful if directed toward tax revision. The steps that are being taken toward a building revival will require months before the steel and related industries could possibly benefit to any large degree.

"Export buying offers more promise, so far as volume is concerned, as some American mills lower their prices to meet foreign ideas. Concessions from $5 to $8 from domestic prices have been given on some recent orders. There is a modest revival of interest in pig iron from European buyers, and a possibility that Japan may come back into this market.

"American scrap dealers have orders for 500,000 tons of steel scrap for the European scrap cartel for first quarter shipments. The reported price is $16.50 (free alongside ship), American ports, $5 a ton below the large transaction a few months ago."

The trade journal reported that Southern Pacific awarded 35,332 tons of its 75,000-ton rail order, 20,406 tons going to Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., 7682 tons to Bethlehem Steel and 7244 tons to Colorado Fuel & Iron.

Brown Co. Plan Changes Likely

In a letter dated November 16, the Brown Co. bondholders' protective committee, of which Charles Francis Adams is chairman and Serge Semenenko is vice-chairman, observes that in its judgment, "important changes in the company plan for reorganization will have to be made in order to arrive at a plan acceptable to the bondholders.

"In order to avoid, if possible, the confusion incident to several plans being presented at the same time to security holders," the letter states, "the committee is continuing its efforts to bring about a general agreement with the representatives of the other interested groups, upon an acceptable plan which will afford adequate protection to the interests of the bondholders and will be fair to the other security holders. Meeting have been arranged with this end in view. It is to be hoped that changes will be forthcoming which will result in a general agreement upon such a plan.

"Bondholders should take no action pending the outcome of the committee's negotiations with the other groups and further clarification of the situation."

Rail Operating Revenues Shown

Expansion Has Been at Slower Rate Than Gain In National Income

While, during the business recession after 1929, the curtailment of the railroads' operating revenues kept pace with the decrease in the national income, revenues during the recovery period have not expanded at as fast rate as the national income, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

Consequently, since 1932, the railroads have received a smaller share of the national income than in previous years. Returns for 1937 will show that, in this respect, this year will be the worst one yet for the railroads. The national income this year will be at least 12.0 per cent higher than in 1936, as compared with the estimated increase of only 2.7 per cent in the railroads' operating revenues.

While the national income will not be more than 11.5 per cent lower than in 1929, operating revenues will be 33.7 per cent below the 1929 level.

The railroads have suffered from their failure to secure an increase in their volume of freight traffic comparable to the expansion which has taken place in the total quantity of goods produced.

The prospect is that freight car loadings this year will be 26.3 per cent below the 1929 volume as compared with a decrease of only 3.4 per cent in the quantity of goods produced.

FREIGHT RATES

It was evident, prior to 1937, that the reduction in the proportion of total goods produced which the railroads transported was the result of the maintenance of freight rates at a higher level than that justified by commodity prices. This caused shippers to rely to a large extent on other means of transportation, such as motor trucks.

In 1937, however, as the result of the elimination of emergency surcharges on railroad freight at the beginning of the year, together with the advance in commodity prices, a favorable relationship between commodity prices and freight rates was established from the standpoint of former standards.

It is now evident that the restoration in 1937 of the previously favorable relationship between freight rates and commodity prices has proved to be ineffective in providing the railroads with their former share of the total volume of freight traffic. This suggests that the railroads in the future must either keep their freight rates below the level of commodity prices or sacrifice part of their former volume of traffic.

It is apparent that in either case, the railroads are facing the prospect of a reduction in their former share of the national income. Such a reduction would be lessened, however, by lower freight rates, since the volume of traffic would be stimulated sufficiently to more than offset a cut in rates.

Freight rates next year, however, will be above the 1937 level as the result of increases recently approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. While rates, on the average, will show only a slight increase, the increase will be enough to make certain that the proportion of the national income received by the railroads next year will be not larger than it has been this year.

In fact, it may be less, especially in view of the possibility of a downward commodity price trend and a further increase in freight rates.

Thus, the increase in freight rates, instead of providing the railroads with more income as intended, is likely to make for a reduction in income. Such a reduction could be more than offset by an extension of the inflationary movement next year and a consequent gain in the national income.

Help from this source, however, is unlikely since there is a good possibility that the national income will show some curtailment next year as the result of deflationary forces now at work.

Noble Response By Workmen to Appeal for Aid

Heart of Majority of Workers Is in Right Place

By B. C. FORBES

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 17—Writing this column today warms up in me more joy than any column in years.

It demonstrates that the heart of the great majority of American workmen is in the right place, that noble causes appeal to them, that they are not callously centered on self.

Schenectady is essentially a working-class city. Its towering industry is General Electric. It has few men of wealth.

Need having risen to extend greatly the community's hospital facilities, a group headed by General Electric's Chester H. Lang, president of Ellis hospital, ventured forth, despite unsettled business conditions, to raise $700,000.

The results not only reflect infinite credit on the inhabitants of this city, but should inspire other communities faced with hospital or other philanthropic problems.

DONATIONS RECEIVED

Donations received approximated one for every family.

The total was 23,189 from a population of about 100,000.

Still more noteworthy was the response by employes of General Electric. No fewer than 14,479 subscribed. They contributed $195,542, while an additional $87,400 came from General Electric officials in the form of large gifts.

Not only so, but 3757 American Locomotive employes furnished $40,524.

The latest figures reveal that the objective of $700,000 was not only achieved, but far surpassed. The grand total recorded is $845,079.

Mr. Lang, after emphasizing that the ratio of subscribers to population has rarely been equalled anywhere, commented:

"The courage and vision of the hospital board in undertaking the campaign under disturbed business conditions reflected a justifiable confidence in the general stability of the community, and also was eloquent proof of the fact that a deep-rooted American tradition—the willingness of the people to support their voluntary hospitals—still flourishes and has abundant vigor.

"In a community such as ours, this represents a tremendous accomplishment."

BECOMES IMPRESSED

In my latest travels I have become impressed by the friendliness of the relations existing between most (though not all) companies and their workers, and by the high regard executives have for at least 90 per cent of their employes. Time and time again high executives have informed me that discontent erupts only from a small proportion of workers, nearly always younger men of brief service—and largely of foreign extraction.

Generally speaking, wage levels are as high today as they were in boom years, with record-breaking hourly and daily rates being paid in numbers of important industries. In many centers work hours have been reduced since 1929.

Since the cost of living is figured out as being today almost 15 per cent under the 1929 level, obviously millions of wage earners are better off now than they ever were before.

How much farther John L. Lewis will be able to go is a question exciting keen interest.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Mrs. Elizabeth Carlin, 143 Morrison Ave., Somerville, Mass., says — "When I first went to Dr. Walsh my blood pressure was 204 and now it is down to 138. I also had bladder trouble. I was quite miserable. I had been treated by Doctors and Hospitals but they did not help me. I read of Dr. Walsh and what he was accomplishing for those who were afflicted with chronic disease and I had Dr. Walsh treat me. The bladder trouble is a thing of the past and I am feeling fine. I think that those who suffer as I did should profit by my experience and have Dr. Walsh cure them." Signed, Elizabeth Carlin.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1937

+ Why hast thou stripped the poor of their clothing? It is thou that hast refused water to the weary.—Book of Job XXII., 4-6. +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Forrest Lee Nicol, pastor of St. John's Church, Fall River. The text for tomorrow will be suggested by the Rev. Walter F. Sturtevant, Main Street Baptist Church, Newport, Vt.

The Editor Says:

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR., proves a worthy successor to his distinguished grandfather, whose name he bears.

Publication of the authentic stenographic report of a secret meeting of the British war council, held PRIOR to American entry into the World War, arouses Senator Lodge to immediate action.

He declares publication of this document proves the necessity for recalling the American delegation from Nine-Power Conference at Brussels.

He urges a prompt and sincere Congressional investigation into the twenty-year suppression of these vitally important papers.

And he wants to know why the people of America were lured into an international conflict under the pretense of "making the world safe for democracy" when the real reason was to make it secure for predatory imperialism.

It was the first Senator Henry Cabot Lodge who led the famous United States battle against American entry into the League of Nations and affairs in which this country has no concern.

By kindly Providence it is now the second Senator Henry Cabot Lodge who continues that battle at a time when the nation is nearer involvement in European intrigue than ever before.

ALL NEW ENGLAND

—supports Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell in her demand that Congressman Rayburn, House majority leader, answer this important question:

"What is the special session of Congress going to do to assist the boot, shoe, leather goods, and cotton and woolen industries of the United States?"

Mr. Rayburn should give us his reply NOW. To date, Secretary of State Hull has been devoting his efforts to his so-called "reciprocal" treaty with Czechoslovakia, which means ruin for scores of New England factories and mills.

Representatives and Senators, including Mr. Rayburn, have the power to help these industries by putting that proposed pact where it belongs—in the Capitol's incinerator. Let us hope that is where it goes. New England workers will be only too glad to supply the match.

NEW BEDFORD

—citizens, under the leadership of Mayor Leo E. J. Carney, offer excellent suggestions for the rehabilitation of Massachusetts industries.

In a memorandum submitted to Governor Hurley, the "Whaler City" group favors a conference of all mayors of the Commonwealth.

The purpose would be to adopt a definite program to encourage the enterprises we now have and to attract others.

In his interview with the Governor, Mayor Carney pointed out that Southern and Western States, in an attempt to bring in new industries, are advertising their "superiority" over New England. He feels, he said, that the Bay State ought to do a little truthful boasting.

We agree with Mr. Carney. Massachusetts, like an old man clinging to his arm-chair, has been too long in retirement. It is time that we borrowed some of the aggressiveness of our competitor States.

RADCLIFFE GIRLS

—tell us the way to lead a Harvard man to the altar is to say a good strong "No!" to almost everything he asks.

This advice, contained in an undergraduate "guidebook" distributed at the college, is said to be based on students' experiences. We don't believe it.

Of course, this is clearly a matter for Beatrice Fairfax—hardly for an editor. Yet we are inclined to rally to the defense of our friends at Harvard. We have met a good many of them, and, without hesitation, we recommend them—enthusiastically.

The trouble is Radcliffe young women haven't met ALL Harvard men.

DEVONSHIRE 1212

—that's the telephone number to dial when a crime or suspicious happening is observed.

Police Commissioner Timilty, in an attempt to make Boston a very unhealthy city for holdup men, thieves and racketeers, is enlisting our whole population in his war on the underworld. He welcomes all telephone "tips," the more the better. And he designates the first three days of next month as a period for the closest possible co-operation between the police and the people.

This is a wise plan. Stopping crime is not solely the Police Department's duty. It is EVERYBODY'S. We should not only obey the law ourselves, but we should also insist upon the same obedience by others.

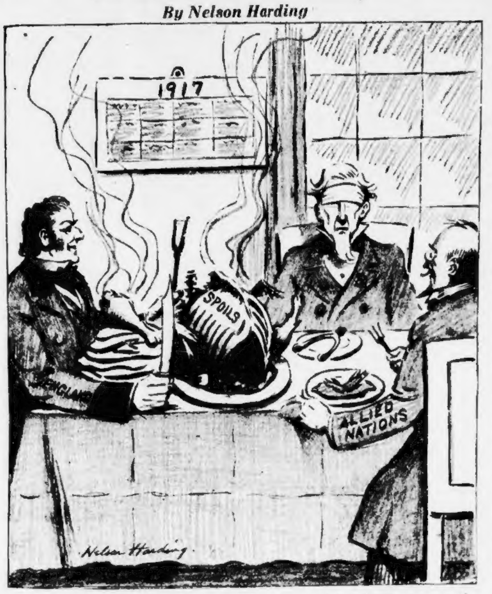
OUR NEW MAYOR'S

—popularity at the mayors' conference in Washington is encouraging.

The fact that Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, who is also president of the United States Mayors' Association, singled him out for special honors at the session's first dinner is proof that Mr. Tobin's ability is appreciated by a veteran office-holder who is admittedly a good judge of men.

John Bull's War Party

By Nelson Harding



In 1917—as the Hearst newspapers are disclosing—Balfour revealed to the British Imperial War Conference the secret treaties negotiated by the British Government to bribe other nations into entering the World War by giving them somebody else's territory.

A month or so later Uncle Sam entered the war on Britain's side—to fight for a great ideal! HE was not told about the cynical secret treaties.

As Mr. Harding depicts, he was the blindfolded guest at John Bull's War Party—and all HE got was a wishbone.

What will Uncle Sam now get out of the Brussels Conference, John Bull's new party?

More entanglements? More lost lives? And more uncollectible foreign debts?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.

THERE is a popular belief that newspapermen are inarticulate when called upon to speak. Many are, but not all. No one is more deft on his banquet feet than Bugs Baer. Bill Corum is glib, witty and informative, and Lowell Thomas is an accomplished toastmaster.

Young Will Hearst has developed into a first rate talker, and Maury Paul, the society scribbler, is almost another Frank Crowninshield. And, of course, there's Irvin Cobb. But after-dinner speaking generally languishes. Chiefly because the banquet idea is passe.

They became pretty much a racket with an over-abundance of windy oratorical bores. So much so the expert after-dinner speaker refused to speak save for a fixed price. Organizers of dinners had elaborate offices and hired high pressure boys to turn on the steam at $10 a plate.

Thus the public dinner became a nuisance and was looked upon with suspicion even when on the level. Today the better speeches are made at luncheons and are limited to three minutes. They are mostly fast quips and personal sallies—which is as it should be.

Dog haters did not get to first base with their plan to drive dogs from New York. Their first peep brought such an avalanche of protest they retired in confusion. Dog lovers countered with their own "better world" campaign—to stop smoking and chewing tobacco on the streets and in cafes, the radio at 11 o'clock at night, heavy fines for frightening the gee-whiz out of innocents with sudden blasts of auto horns, and a list of about 50 other disregarded daily nuisances far more annoying than a dog on a leash.

It is pointed out that dogs do not do one-half of one per cent of the damage done by careless and drunken motorists, and nothing is done to drive them from cities.

Among current heart throbs around the broadcasting studios is Tommy Riggs, whose voice is also that of the wistful Betty Lou. Riggs is a college graduate, 29 years old, and not only has the build of a fullback, but a Grecian profile and a natural marcelle. He is a graduate of Ohio State and his home is in Pittsburgh. He is considered the radio find of the year.

Glib gabbery: Clem McCarthy talks 40 words a minute, faster than even Floyd Gibbons. The two machine-gun spielers are friends and often huddle over a midnight hamburger to swap experiences, and it sounds like water rushing over a dam. In his chatter-box monologue days in vaudeville Julius Tannen was about the fastest talker of his day. But the champ talker, I understand, is a woman radio announcer in Paris. She doubles McCarthy's record with a few words to spare.

So many radio stars have to overcome the handicap of harsh sounding voices. H. V. Kaltenborn and Fred Allen, for example. The most irritating to my mind, and apparently deliberately, are the yowlings of Martha Raye. It is no voice for a home that likes peace and quietude, yet radio sum-ups, indicate a popularity. The most pleasant and soothing male voice on stage or radio is that of Herbert Marshall.

And my choice among the ladies is the well-modulated tone of the announcer Rosalind for that musical program on the air embodying loveliness and charm.

My flinch from harsh voices is doubtless a reaction from a year or so of servitude under a managing editor Simon Legree, who roared and pounded the desk for no reason other than to show he was boss. Every time he barked I recoiled like a lizard at sudden touch. Slinking, cowering. So such self-respect did I lose under his despotism that with the last half-gill of courage I quit and came to New York.

So perhaps I owe him a lot. Had I remained I would probably be the shriveled and tittupy figure in the far corner desk, darting in and out rabbit-like, for fear if the editor saw me he would be reminded I was on the payroll and strike my name off. There's one in every editorial room.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

When a wealthy widow marries a man half her age, it merely means that she has added one more to her collection of expensive pets.

A small boy can't see the use of washing the back of his neck—and no grown man can see the use of keeping his conscience clean on more than one side at a time.

Concrete takes 21 days to harden; but it takes longer than that for a man's love to get firm and solid enough to hold up under the thought of tying himself for life to just one woman.

If you are a man, never waste your time trying to figure a woman out; just keep quiet and wait—and she'll soon spill over and tell you all about herself, or burst.

It's the plain, undecorative man, like the plain, substantial kitchen clock, that can usually be most depended on. The ornamental, drawing-room variety are always either fast, unreliable or running down.

Until the day when she renounces her last hope of seeing some man's eye light up at sight of her, the average woman will always do SOMETHING to her hair.

It is unfair to say that a man cannot be romantically faithful to one woman all his life. Nobody can say that, until some man TRIES.

Marriage, says the Cynical Bachelor, is what changes a girl from an alluring possibility to a life-long liability.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

A FEW weeks ago I read a book on science written by a skilled journalist. It was marred, in my opinion, by too close adherence to scientific style and usage. It smelled of the lamp.

Several years ago, Dr. Paul de Kruiff, a physician of high standing wrote "Men Against Death," and again in this writer's opinion it suffered from the sports page lingo which the doctor seemed to think the popularization of his subject demanded.

Going to Rome, writers always seem too much inclined to do as the Romans do. Why can't they just be themselves? I quote from a highly stimulating and informing book, "Apes, Men and Morons," just published by Dr. Earnest A. Hooton, professor of anthropology at Harvard University.

"He (man) must convince himself that the act of grabbing is somehow noble and beautiful, and that he can reap in righteousness and murder in magnanimity. He insists upon playing the game, not only with an ace up his sleeve, but also with the smug conviction that God put it there."

When I was a cub reporter, there was an ogreish old copy-reader who loved nothing better than to slaughter flossy alliteration like that. We all hated him, but as we learned our craft we thanked him for whatever clarity and honesty we worked into our grist of news writing. I wish he had lived to read copy on Dr. Hooton's book.

With this quibble aside, here's a grand book about man, his ancestors and his origin, his physiology and his behaviour, his innate and induced characteristics, his social heritage and its physical basis, and a call for a "biological purge."

Dr. Hooton believes that if a man is saved, and if he is to achieve a real civilization, there must be consciousness and control in his continued evolution, and there must be an end to the proliferation of the unfit which alarms every great geneticist in the world. He writes:

"Now it seems to me perfectly clear that what we must do, in some way or other, is to encourage a sit-down reproductive strike of the busy breeders among the morons, criminals and social ineffectuals of our population. Probably compulsory sterilization alone would serve in the cause of the insane and the mentally deficient, but it is very difficult to enforce such a measure in a democracy, unless it has been preceded by an educational campaign which has reached all the teachable and socially-minded individuals of the electorate.

"Probably the only effective method of obtaining the desired result would be to establish in our secondary schools and college courses of applied human biology, which would disseminate knowledge of the facts of heredity and the relationship of man's organism to his behaviour.

"The young ought to be brought to an early realization that their success in life and their value to society depend not only upon occupational skill and character, but also upon an understanding that their reproductive function must be exercised in accordance with their individual capacities and limitations. We must inculcate into the rising generation a code of biological ethics.

"Let us temper mercy with justice and dispense charity with intelligence. We must stop trying to cure malignant biologic growths with patent sociological nostrums. The emergency demands a surgical operation."

The threat of the ascendancy of the unfit is an old story. But it is, nonetheless, an increasingly urgent and ominous problem of our day. Certainly one has to step back a few eons to get a look at it, and this is what Dr. Hooton does. Few of us have either the time or the scholarly equipment to plug through Lamarck or Darwin. Dr. Hooton does it for us, makes the narrative one of fascinating interest, and brings forward the balance of all informed thinking in this field.

He finds man, physically, pretty much a make-shift job, but he likes him at that, and thinks there is hope for him if ever he really uses that brain which, somehow, he has mysteriously contrived.

March of Events

"LET me see some samples, please, of your finest silk diamond-studded gas-masks," may soon be an everyday request in the swanky shops of London, Paris, Berlin and Rome.

Yes, styles in gas-masks have made their appearance. A cable from Rome says:

"Smartly designed masks, differing for men and women, are displayed in a shop-window on Central Via Tritone. Placed on models such as department stores use to exhibit furs, the masks are offered in a matter-of-fact way that startles American tourists."

"Is my gas-mask on straight?" may soon be the usual question among the ladies instead of "is my hat on straight?" or "is there too much rouge on my lips?"

Almost all memorable discoveries in the realm of science are made personally and accidentally—and NEVER THROUGH THE HELP OF THE STATE.

Nearly a hundred years ago a Dr. Charles T. Jackson, a Boston chemist, suddenly became unconscious in his laboratory by inhaling sulphuric ether.

At about the same time Dr. Willliam T. G. Morton, a Boston dentist, was looking around for some means to deaden the frightful pain caused by extracting the roots of diseased teeth.

Dr. Jackson told Dr. Morton what had happened to him in his laboratory. The latter then developed a method of ether inhalation, and on September 30, 1846, he administered the anesthetic while Dr. J. C. Warren performed THE FIRST PAINLESS DENTAL OPERATION IN THE WORLD.

That was a blessed day in the annals of suffering humanity—the discovery of an anesthetic for pain.

But there was no anesthetic for Dr. Morton. He lived and died in poverty. Congress talked about giving him $100,000, but he never got it. He had to pawn a medal that the French Academy struck off for him in his honor.

Now, ironically enough, this great benefactor of mankind will achieve world-wide fame in a motion picture made from Rene Fulopmiller's book on the Boston dentist.

Scientific pioneers find out that their work, like virtue, is its own reward—and that's a pity.

Soviet Russia has never minded her own business.

An Italian official, in speaking of the Japanese-Italian-German anti-Communist pact, says that "RUSSIA MAY HAVE ALL THE COMMUNISM IT WANTS AS LONG AS SHE KEEPS IT AT HOME."

Russia's "home" is the whole world. The Third International (the Comintern) was founded and today functions for the express purpose of overthrowing all governments and proclaiming the dictatorship of the proletariat on their ruins.

If a Fascist bloc looms throughout the world the cause is the spider of Moscow, which didn't know enough to do its spinning and weaving at home.

Listen, World!

YOU come upon it at the turn of the little trail which leads from the highway.

The highway is a busy place, and noisy. All day and all night the traffic roars by. Racing speedsters, rumbling trucks loaded with fruit, lumber and hay. Gypsy caravans. Box cars with blooded horses going down to the races. Enormous machines, crawling by creaking inches up to the mines. Terrible tanks of sudden death which all the other cars avoid.

All day the horns and mufflers hoot and bellow, snarl and shriek. Hoboes and bindle men plug along, head down under the blasting sun, or stand wearily, thumbing for a ride—the sweat spreading in dark blotches across their sour, faded shirts.

A busy place, the highway—filled with clamor and pressure and the reek of hot oil, hot bodies. A hurried, worried loop of screeching asphalt, herling itself insanely past the blur of woodland and meadow, vineyard and field—and the dip in the tangled weeds where the little trail begins.

It is not easy to find the trail. Most pass without ever seeing it. Only a vague line at first, faltering through the grass, fumbling across the rutted earth of the resting fields—rising, beween scrub oak and tumbled rock, up and over the hill—

Then, suddenly, the heat and haste are all behind you, and you are in a cool, quiet place, walled around with trees. In the spring this place is blue and sweet with lupine, and the plaques of turquoise sky lie embedded in the peacock dark ceiling of the pines. But now it is Autumn, and the place is floored with dry grass, fine as golden floss, and russet fern. Above the grass the light lies low and thick as honey.

The oaks glow like new copper in the setting sun. Against their deep, mahogany shadow the pine boles rise in pinkish columns, up and up, through the pale smoke of the needles, to the still brightness of the sky.

There are few sounds. A cow bell jangles and a jay bird squalls. The tinkle of a brook half drowned in leaves, a thread of silver through the warp of gold.

But all the fragrance of the Fall is now released. The tang of pine . . . the willows' sharp, clean breath . . . the lusty odor of the moistened earth. Stronger than all, the heady must of grapes. The air is purple with their ripened bloom . . . the sunset gullies drip with ruddy wine.

So still! So clean and healing, this small place apart. My body lets its worried tension ease. The clamor quiets in my restless brain. The pent up pain and hate drain slowly from my heart.

I rest. I lose myself. I am at peace. I am again a part of the good earth . . . I rest and root within its deep, sure strength. My mind forgets its nagging fears and doubts. Once more I give my spirit back to Life. I lay my scarred and sullied self aside . . . I rest and wait within the hand of God.
